EXPLOSION ON FALL RIVER BOAT IN HELL GATE

Hunt and Crawford Enter Plea 'Not Guilty'

UNDER $25,000 BAIL

HEELERS PUT TAMMANY FUGITIVE ON TRAIN

JAMES KRUP SKIPS $5,000 BAIL AND FLEES TO SAN FRANCISCO.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—James Krup, alias Krup, the fugitive Murphy heeler, who "jumped" his bail yesterday, fled the city in the night.

This startling news came to-day on the heels of the announcement that Anson Cornell, chairman of the Election Board which voted Krup, who had been indicted and for whom a warrant was issued, was a fugitive.

A man who in every respect answered the description of Krup was taken to a train at midnight in Jersey City by two rough-looking persons.

Man Was Drunk.

The man was so drunk he could walk only with difficulty.

His condition attracted the attention of the station master, who protested that the man was too drunk to be allowed aboard the train. One of the men who accompanied Krup, a rather tall, light-haired man, rough in appearance, became very much excited and insisted that his charge be permitted to enter the car.

The night detective, acting under orders of the station master, finally led Krup to the water faucet and his head was given a soaking.

This had the effect of arousing Krup, and he was finally permitted to board the day coach, where he promptly fell asleep.

The light-haired man had a ticket for San Francisco, which was turned over to Krup.

After the train departed, the light haired man and his companion apparently returned to New York.

Investigation by AMERICAN reporters to-day demonstrated that Krup and his two guardians went to Jersey City by way of the Twenty-third street ferry.

Had San Francisco Ticket.

The ticket for San Francisco was purchased at the Twenty-third street ferry office shortly before eleven o'clock last night. The ticket entitles its holder to a through passage to Los Angeles, via Washington and Chicago, there via Burlington route to Plattsburg, Ill., where a change is made to the Santa Fe road and thence to Los Angeles.

The light-haired man told the night station master, Mr. Hathaway, in the hearing of D. M. Leverett, the night detective, that Krup, his drunken charge, was a race track man, who was being sent away because he drank too much. His own name he said was Luz, and he was a trainer of horses.

After the men left, Mr. Hathaway recalled that the drunken man answered closely the description of Krup.

Men Make New Confession, Accusing "Mrs. Dean" In the Suit Case Crime.

Describe Pathetic Scene as the Nurses Knelt to Pray for Girl Victim.

William E. Hunt, alias "Howard," and Louis W. Crawford, who confessed to disposing of the body of Susan Geary, victim of the suit case tragedy, were to-day held in $25,000 bail each by Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court on the indictment charging them with being accessories before and after the fact" in the crime that caused the death of the chorus girl.

The men, who were arrested three weeks ago in New York, were brought to Boston last night by Chief Watts and Superintendent Pierce of the local police department. According to statements made by the officers, the prisoners have made a new confession naming the widow Mrs. Dean" as the one who performed the operation that resulted in the pretty Cambridge dancing girl's death.

The two men were brought into court at 9:30 and arraigned before Judge Stevens by Captain Dugan, head of the bureau of criminal investigation. Captain Dugan made return to Clerk Manning of the requisition under which they were brought here from New York.

Howard Looked Worried.

The prisoners sat in the cage. They were both dressed neatly. Howard had a worried look, while Crawford appeared unconcerned. Clerk Manning called their names and said:

"An indictment found by the grand jurors charges each of you with being accessories before and after the fact in this crime. What say you, William E. Howard, are you guilty or not guilty?"

Howard replied in a few votes.

"I would like to consult counsel," he said. "I plead not guilty."

In response to the same question Crawford replied promptly and without a change of expression:

"Not guilty."

Assistant District Attorney Michael J. Dwyer asked that the bail for each of the prisoners be fixed at the same sum as in the case of Dr. McLeod. Judge Stevens so agreed, and the men were held in $25,000 each.

Nurses Pray for Victim.

They were then taken to the detention room and later were transferred to the Charles street jail.

Regarding the additional confession made by Howard and Crawford, it is stated that they gave further particulars of the pathetic scene at the death bed of the unfortunate Susan Geary.

At her request a woman nurse and the paid-stricken Mrs. Dean knelt and prayed fervently for the repose of her soul.

Chief Watts and Superintendent Pierce accompanied the men from New York, where they were released on extradition papers given the Boston officers in the New York police headquarters. They waived their rights to contest them.

Chief Watts will ask the court to hold Hunt and Crawford for the Superior Court, and will request that bail be placed at $30,000 for each.

Give Police More Information.

On the train from New York to Boston Hunt and Crawford made a second confession, which was taken in shorthand by a stenographer connected with the district attorney's office. In confirmation differs Boston-Bound Passengers on the Warren Spent Night in Terror in Dangerous Channel, While the Warren Was Helpless After Accident in Engine Room.

Tossed about the waters of Hell Gate in a disabled steamboat 200 passengers, bound for Boston, went through a night of terror, say dispatches from New York to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

The steamer, the Warren, which runs on a newly organized steamship line, left her pier at the foot of Murray street, New York, at the usual time last night, bound for Fall River, where it was to dock this morning. When just off Hell Gate, and opposite the Astoria gas works, a muffled explosion in the fireroom was heard, and a minute later the engine room crew came rushing up the narrow ladders, enveloped in clouds of steam.

VESSEL DRAGS HER ANCHOR.

For a moment there was a panic, which the captain tried to calm. He told the passengers that there was no danger, but at the same time he ordered the crew to drop the anchor. The vessel slowly drifted toward the dangerous rocks of Hell Gate, a high wind causing it to drag the anchor.

When the captain was asked what the trouble was he made an evasive reply, but later said that several of the tubes in one of the boilers had blown out, and that the vessel would remain in the channel, make repairs and proceed to Fall River.

This brought a storm of protest from the passengers. The captain paid no attention to the crowd until it appointed a committee, headed by Henry F. Gillig of New York. The captain refused to discuss the trouble with Mr. Gillig, and said that he would not turn the boat back toward New York.

Petition from Passengers.

Mr. Gillig went back to the passengers, who had gathered in an excited crowd in the main saloon. He made a short speech, telling them of the captain's position. This petition was then framed, and Mr. Gillig carried it to the captain:

"We, the undersigned passengers on the disabled steamship Warren, respectfully request that the captain return to New York city without further delay, and we demand the necessary transportation ticket by rail to reach our destination. We reserve the right to seek such damages and losses as we may sustain through the gross mismanagement of the company."

For a time the captain refused to turn the boat about.

Mr. Gillig reported that it was the captain's intention to have the boat repaired at midnight and then proceed for Fall River. When the passengers heard the report there was a howl, as many of them had engagements in Boston to-day.

Actress in Despair.

Adele Llaskl, an actress, due to open at the Bijh Theatre at a matinee to-day, declared that the arrangement would ruin her.

Another meeting of the passengers was held and they demanded to be returned to New York.

The absence of light about the boat caused much of the uneasiness and it was not until a secret service agent named Wessel, from San Francisco, went to the captain telling him that he was not complying with the law, that there was sufficient light.

It was 2:40 o'clock this morning when the passengers, most of them chilled to the bone, heard the welcome sound given to weigh anchor. The return trip was made to New York, and the passengers hustled for wagons to get their baggage off to the Grand Central station.

The steamboat company offered all those who desired to continue by boat a haven for the day and to return to the others the money they had paid for passage. The majority came ashore at once.

Says She Is the Old Enterprise.

A man who had examined the vessel's name said she was the old Enterprise, and later the City of Fitchburg, and had no papers as the Warren. The story was circulated among the passengers, and added to their discomfiture.

Among those who spent the night on board the Warren were: Eli H. Glassman, Fall River; J. Witter, No. 170 Hanover street, Boston; Philip Motkurez, Fall River; W. M. Zark, Taunton, Mass; Henry Cortney, Fall River; L. Rubenstein, Fall River; W. M. Zark, Taunton, Mass.; Henry Pfalnder, Lawrence, Mass.; M. Copper, Lawrence, Mass.; Joseph Lowell; Lupo Vincent, Boston; S. J. Briggs, No. 182 Huntington avenue, Boston; Peter Lonzen, Fall River; Philip Muskowitck, Fall River; Gus Leonard, Fall River; Joseph Hughes, Taunton; Joseph Dunkle, Fall River; Hyman Lezowick and Morris Lezowick, all of Fall River.

'DON'T CARE RAP FOR PROTESTS'

At the office of the Enterprise Steamship Company an agent said that the Warren had been inspected and passed as in good condition by the government inspectors. He was unable to give the date of the inspection. When applied to was made to the steward of the Warren to allow the certificate to be seen he answered:

"There is no necessity of showing anything to any one. You can say whatever you want to about this boat. We don't care a rap for protests from any quarter. It is no one's business whether or not we had a certificate from the inspectors."

FITZGERALD WINS AND FROTHINGHAM IS NAMED

SUCCESSFUL DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE CARRIES ALL BUT FOUR WARDS.

The result of the Democratic primaries was a sweeping victory for John F. Fitzgerald over Edward J. Donovan. The successful candidate received 28,278 votes against 24,381 for his opponent, giving him a majority of 3,897. Fitzgerald carried all the wards in the city except four.

Louis A. Frothingham won the Republican nomination for Mayor by 255 votes over Judge Henry S. Dewey. The fight for the Republican nomination was close and for some time the result was in doubt. Senator Callender practically withdrew from the race early in the day and declares that he advised several of his supporters to vote for Judge Dewey.

The first official report given out in this city showed Judge Dewey a winner by 13033 eight votes. These figures were from the election officials in the various precincts and were brought to the City Hall by policemen. The reports were compiled by the Press and City Government Returns. Errors on the part of election officials were responsible for the short count given out to the press that Judge Dewey was elected.

The judge himself believed that he was elected and many of his friends called at his home to congratulate him on his victory. For some time he was in doubt as the returns came in. Frothingham had a big lead in the first sixty precincts, but he had expected that. Then the returns were more favorable and soon it was a slip and yank race. Accordingly, the report that he had won was no surprise either to him or to his friends. Judge Dewey has announced that he will ask for a recount.

LOST BUT FOUR WARDS.

There was no opposition to James H. Doyle for the Democratic nomination for street commissioner. For the Republican nomination William E. Hannan and William Lustig were the contestants. Hannan won with 11,017 votes to Lustig's 7,084.

From the time the first returns came in it was evident that Fitzgerald would win. The only wards he lost in the entire city were Wards 2, 8, 9 and 11. In Ward 2 he lost by ten thirty-five votes, and Ward 11 by but fifty-seven.

Mr. Fitzgerald's old ward, 6, gave him 1430 votes against 930 for his opponent, and Ward 24, where he now lives, gave him 1271 votes to 958 for Donovan.

Ward 8 remained faithful to Donovan, giving him 2,000 votes more than to Fitzgerald. The latter, however, swept Charlestown and the South Boston wards. Roxburys, Dorchester, West Roxbury and Brighton went for Fitzgerald by small majorities.

SEVERAL MINOR VICTORIES.

The momentum of the Fitzgerald movement carried with it several minor victories. In Ward 18, where he has been supreme for many years. The McNary ward committee was beaten by the ticket headed by William F. Hickey, the Fitzgerald lieutenant in the ward.

Ward 7, the home of the president of the Democratic city committee, W. F. A. Fitzgerald, went for John F. Fitzgerald in spite Dewey's strength came largely from the Democratic wards. He carried Wards 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 24. Mr. Frothingham carried the others.

VICTORY IS CERTAIN NOW, SAYS QUINCY

Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy replied as follows to a request for his views on the results of the primaries:

"While I have taken no public part in the nomination campaign, my sympathies have been strongly with Mr. Fitzgerald, and I am much pleased with his handsome victory, which has been won by his personal efforts and against heavy odds. I have confidently expected this result, believing that the sentiment of the great body of Democratic voters was so strongly in his favor that nothing could overcome it.

"The returns, showing that twenty-one wards out of the twenty-five were carried by Mr. Fitzgerald and that a change of seventy-seven votes would have carried the additional wards for him, prove that his support was in no way local or sectional, but extended generally throughout the city.

"The phenomenal Democratic vote of nearly 53,000 cast in the primaries and the decisive victory show that many of the nominees is entitled to receive the hearty support of all Democrats who recognize the obligations of party loyalty and who believe that the will of the majority, fairly and fully expressed should be accepted.

"Whatever bitterness was aroused during the campaign should now be forgotten, and all members of the party should come together in a spirit of conciliation and harmony to secure the election of the nominee.

"While there will, of course, be a contest before the election, I believe that the returns assure the choice of Mr. Fitzgerald as Mayor. With a warm three-cornered contest to draw them out the Republicans were only able to cast about 24,000 votes, against the 52,000 cast for the two Democratic nominees.

"It do not see my probability that the tremendous Democratic lead in the primaries can be overcome at the polls. Mr. Fitzgerald received 7,000 more votes than the combined vote of Messrs. Dewey, Frothingham and Callender.

"He will certainly receive on election day Democratic votes which he received at the primaries, and he only needs to draw in addition some 8,500 votes out of the 24,000 cast for Mr. Donovan to give him a majority over all votes cast at the primaries. I do not see how the most hopeful Republican can fail to concede the issue in our favor.

"Nor is it a sanguine Democratic estimate to claim that at least three-quarters of the Donovan vote will be cast for Mr. Fitzgerald on election day. This would give him 16,000 votes, a figure which no other candidate can possibly approach.

"But the Republicans have serious differences of their own to reconcile and heal over, and they may have quite as serious difficulties to reconcile a united front at the polls as the Democrats.

"It is well known that the differences between Messrs. Dewey and Frothingham, and what they respectively stand for are at least as great as those between either of these candidates and Mr. Fitzgerald. The returns, upon their face, fully sustain Judge Dewey's statement upon the stump that the Republican candidate must receive 15,000 or more Democratic votes in order to win. I cannot recognize it as a political possibility that Mr. Frothingham

ODELL BRANDS HYDE'S STATEMENT AS FALSE

DRAMATIC DENIAL MADE AT INSURANCE INVESTIGATION BY FORMER GOVERNOR.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Former Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., in his testimony before the insurance investigating committee yesterday, vehemently denied statements made by James Hazen Hyde, and in answer to the question as to whether or not he had ever made threats of hostile legislation against the Mercantile Trust Company, said:

"There is no truth in that statement, so help me, God!"

Under the direct examination of Counsel Hughes of the committee Mr. Odell made some startling revelations. Among them were those:

Fathered Amsler Bill.

He practically fathered the Amsler bill which provided for the repeal of the Mercantile Trust. This bill he caused to be killed when he discovered that public sentiment was opposed to it.

He informed Mr. Hyde, he said, that no matter whether his suit was settled or not he would not retaliate on the Trust Company through the Legislature.

The exercises for a settlement of his suit originated with counsel for the Mercantile and with Mr. Hyde. He did not ask E. H. Hartman's influence.

His purpose in having the Amsler bill introduced was to bring about an investigation of the Mercantile Trust Company, which he said, with Alexander & Green, counsel for the Equitable Life, had been behind the flotation of sixteen corporations which subsequently became involved, costing the public immense sums of money.

Laid Facts Before Jerome.

He laid all the facts concerning the Ship building scandal before District Attorney Jerome, for the purpose of having him criminally prosecute the men responsible, but that Mr. Jerome, after investigation, informed him there were no grounds for criminal prosecution.

He said he wrote a letter to President

Roosevelt favoring the appointment of Mr. Hyde as Ambassador to France about three weeks before his stupendous suit was settled by the Mercantile Trust. He declared the settlement of his suit had nothing whatever to do with his effort in behalf of Mr. Hyde.

Several months before he brought his suit against the Mercantile Trust, in August, 1904, he had an interview with Charles M. Schwab, who controlled the Shipbuilding Company, relative to a settlement of his claim, and that Mr. Schwab it was a case for criminal prosecution. Senator Edgar T. Brackett was present at this interview and told Mr. Schwab the same thing.

He never collected campaign contributions from the insurance companies, but that Senator Thomas C. Platt always collected these contributions.

Governor Odell faced the ordeal prepared for him calmly. He gave his testimony in a calm, dispassionate way even when he denied the statements of Mr. Hyde. Then he pounded the arm of the witness chair vigorously.

Senator Clarence M. Depew, who was accompanied to the hearing room by Mrs. Depew, told how he had participated in the Equitable scandals and how he was once $21,000 ahead of the game, and then lost that and more to Morgan's ship trust.

Hyde Asked Depew's Help.

Regarding the ambassadorship to Paris, Senator Depew said that James H. Hyde asked him to use his influence to secure for him the appointment of ambassador to France. Senator Depew told Mr. Hyde that it was impossible because of his age and inexperience in public affairs, Mr. Hyde came to him again, and Senator Depew subsequently brought the matter to the attention of the President, who looked on Mr. Hyde and found it impossible to appoint him.

Senator Depew testified that as a director of the Equitable and one of its counsel, he had been conversant, generally speaking, with the methods employed in the management of the society.

"Did you have information from time to

WITTE ASKS CZAR TO DECLARE MARTIAL LAW

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 17.—The situation here has assumed a highly dangerous phase. Count Witte, feeling himself deserted, has recommended to the Emperor, in order to prevent disastrous disorders, to declare martial law to-day, thus bringing about a climax.

In the present temper of the people such provocation will be sure to raise a storm, the end of which no one can foresee. The powerful Union of Unions would inevitably declare a strike on a scale that would mean anarchy throughout the land.

It is significant that two regiments of trusted dragoons have been sent into St. Petersburg. Further, the Minister of War refuses an application to allow the multitudinous saliors to be defended by advocates, while the new Minister of Commerce adds further provocation by saying that the strikers ought to be proceeded against as criminals.

Land Concessions Granted.

An imperial manifesto granting land concessions to the peasants was issued. The land redemption tax payments will, from January 14, 1906, be reduced one-half, and from January 14, 1907, will be totally abolished. The Peasants' Bank is granted

FITZGERALD AND FROTHINGHAM ARE NOMINATED FOR MAYOR

HOT FIGHTS IN MANY WARDS UNTIL THE END

Successful Democratic Candidate Carries All Wards Except Four.

DEWEY WILL ASK RECOUNT

ham could possibly receive any such vote.

"Therefore I look forward confidently to the election of Mr. Fitzgerald and in my honest judgment, formed upon some knowledge of the requirements of the Mayor's office and a long acquaintance with Mr. Fitzgerald, that upon the whole, and considering all political and other conditions, he can give the city a better administration than any other candidate who has yet appeared in the field."

FROTHINGHAM IS VICTOR; RECOUNT MAY FAVOR DEWEY

The fight for the Republican nomination for mayor developed early into a contest between Louis A. Frothingham and Judge Henry S. Dewey. It was a neck and neck race and the result was not known until the returns had been twice canvassed. The final decision gave the victory to Frothingham with 9,083 votes, to Judge Dewey's 9,712.

On the returns sent in to the City Hall by the precinct officers as soon as the votes were counted in each precinct it seemed that Judge Dewey had won by thirty-eight votes and it was so announced by the officials. Friends notified Judge Dewey and he received congratulations from a large number of people. For two hours he believed himself elected and his friends believed it also. Then came the revision. So close is the contest that a recount will be necessary, and to-day there are many people who feel sure that the recount will result in Judge Dewey's favor. Mr. Frothingham's friends, however, are satisfied that the revised figures are correct and have no fear of the result of the recount.

Callender's Weak Showing.

Mr. Callender made his best showing in his home ward, Ward 24, but failed to carry it. He received 658 votes there to 780 for Dewey and 572 for Frothingham. In a characteristic statement Senator Callender said that "all was lost but honor." In the other two Dorchester wards—16 and 20—Mr. Callender made a feeble showing. In Ward 20 Frothingham polled 1,122 votes, Dewey 1,028 and Callender 556. In Ward 16, Dewey, 311 votes; Frothingham 291 and Callender 61. Judge Dewey carried Ward 10 by 180 votes, polling 827 to Frothingham's 647.

Considering the fact that Mr. Frothingham had given up the leadership of the House to become a candidate for Mayor, and had back of him the entire Republican organization and the support of the Good Government Association, Judge Dewey, making his fight single-handed and alone, made a phenomenal run.

The earlier returns, as they came in, clearly indicated that the fight for Mr. Frothingham a close race for the nomination, and several times during the evening it seemed as if he might prove the victor.

Hannan Defeats Loring.

The Republican organization was able to carry only thirteen wards for Speaker Frothingham. They were Wards 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 13, 14, 20, 21, 22, 23 and 25. Ward 13, where Messrs. Frothingham and Dewey live, gave the former 1,468 votes to 417 for Dewey, a plurality of 1,051.

Representative William C. Hannan won in the Republican contest for Street Commissioner, polling 11,917 votes to 7,041 for his opponent, William Loring of Ward 20.

Taking the vote for mayoralty candidates as a basis, the total vote in the Republican primaries, over 21,000, was the greatest ever thrown.

George H. Battle won the Republican aldermanic nomination in the First District and ex-Alderman Charles F. Gardner was again nominated for the board after retiring from politics for several years in the Fifth District.

Among ward committee contests the "Dunning-Keys ticket" in Ward 11, headed by Stephen M. Dunning, was defeated by one by the regular ward committee ticket, headed by Courtenay Guild. In Ward 1 the Marno ward committee ticket was an easy winner and in Ward 18 the Heins ticket won.

JUDGE DEWEY WILL ASK FOR RECOUNT FOR FRIENDS' SAKE

"In justice to my friends I must ask for a recount," said Judge Dewey when he was told of the final result of the ballot for a Republican nominee for mayor. He did not appear to be much affected by the result, although he had previously understood that he had won by thirty-eight votes.

Judge Dewey received the returns by telephone at his home, where he had come early in the evening. After he had dined with his mother, sister and his brother, Frank, the returns began to come in and they showed plainly that the contest was a close one.

When it was announced that he had been nominated, a carriage with a party of friends drove to his house and he was warmly congratulated. The judge appeared to be delighted at the result. Many personal friends and business acquaintances called on the telephone and extended congratulations, and later on a party of Dorchester enthusiasts called on the judge and expressed gratification at the result.

While the party was sitting in the library talking the situation over, the newspaper received the correction of a mistake in the earlier figures made Mr. Frothingham the nominee. Immediately there was a change in the feelings of the assembled friends, but the judge received his calm as if some one else had been the candidate.

FITZGERALD THANKS PARTY AND OUTLINES HIS POLICY

I am very grateful to the Democratic voters of Boston for the confidence they have reposed in me. The fight was a very hard one, and kept me busy every minute of the time. The tremendous vote cast in the Democratic primaries and the small vote cast in the Republican primaries shows that the Democratic nominee will be elected. I shall make my campaign for election along the same lines that characterized the primary campaign. I firmly believe that the mayor of Boston can accomplish a great deal in the direction of promoting Boston's business interests. This is the one idea that will dominate my administration. I am going to do everything I can to make a busier Boston.—statement by John F. Fitzgerald to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

M'NARY LOSES, CURLEY WINS IN THE COMMITTEES

In their contests for control of the ward committees the triumph of the Fitzgerald forces was almost as complete as in the mayoralty fight, the only wards where the organization forces defeated the Fitzgerald ticket, when opposed by the latter, being Wards 2, 8 and 26.

Probably the most notable defeat was that of Congressman William S. McNary, Fitzgerald's bitterest personal and political opponent. In Ward 13, McNary's ward, the ward ticket which he headed was defeated by that headed by Representative William E. Hickey by over 100 votes, Hickey's ticket carrying eight out of the nine precincts in the ward.

In Ward 17 the Curley forces carried the ward committee and the municipal Fitzgerald ticket by a substantial majority over the tickets headed by Theodore A. Glynn and former Representative John J. Mansfield.

There were contests for the ward committees on the Democratic side in every ward but Wards 9, 11, 14, 23 and 24. The Republicans had contesting ward committee tickets in Wards 1, 6, 7, 9, 11, 12, 18, 19, 20 and 23.

15 Democratic Contests.

For the city convention which is to nominate the five candidates for the new school board there were contesting delegations in fifteen of the twenty-five wards on the Democratic side while the Republicans had contests in Wards 6, 7, 8 and 18 only.

In Ward 1, East Boston, the ward committee ticket headed by William F. McClellan, a staunch supporter of John F. Fitzgerald, was easily victorious, while in Ward 2 the organization ticket headed by John L. Kelly defeated the opposition ticket headed by Representative-elect John J. Douglass.

In Charlestown the Fitzgerald forces carried Wards 3 and 4 while the organization ticket headed by Arthur W. Dolan won out in Ward 5. The opposition ticket in the latter ward was not, however, a Fitzgerald ticket. Senator James J. Mellen headed the victorious Ward 3 ticket and ex-Alderman Philip J. O'Brien the Ward 4 ticket.

The ward committee ticket headed by Martin M. Lomasney in Ward 8 and the city delegation headed by Daniel J. Kiley swamped the opposition led by Timothy W. Crowley by ten to one.

Montague Lost in Ward 10.

In Wards 7 and 9 the ward committees headed respectively by William T. A. Fitzgerald, president of the Democratic City Committee and Congressman John A. Kelliher were unopposed by the Fitzgerald forces. There were two tickets in the field in Ward 7 however, John L. Donovan, as usual, heading the opposition to W. T. A. Fitzgerald.

The Monagnes forces lost control of the Ward 10 Democratic ticket and divided the city delegation with the opposition. James H. Doyle carried both the ward committee and the city delegation in Ward 12. In Ward 13 the ward committee ticket, headed by William E. Newton, won. The city delegation, headed by Eugene T. Brazell, in the same ward was defeated, although Brazell himself won a place, defeating Patrick F. Logan.

In Ward 16 Mabell L. Jennings and the organization ticket were defeated by 100 votes.

In Ward 19 Representative John F. Egan, chairman of the ward committee, headed the victorious ticket, and in Ward 20 William J. Power, treasurer of the Democratic City Committee, led the winning organization ticket. Harry Nawn, as usual, continues in control of Ward 21.

Lee Won in Brighton.

John H. Lee won five places on the ward committee out in Brighton, while the Comerford ticket gets five places. For the other three places three Lee men are tied with a Comerford man, insuring Lee control of the ward for another year.

In the wards where there were contests for the control of the Republican ward committee the winning tickets were headed by John Mercer in Ward 1, Jerome A. Pettiti in Ward 6, Walter L. Sears in Ward 7, James W. H. Merrick in Ward 8, Courtenay Guild in Ward 11, George E. Lovett in Ward 12, Charles A. Heinz in Ward 18, Lorenzo D. F. Marston in Ward 19, Archibald F. Davison in Ward 20, and Arthur J. Brethewer in Ward 23. In Ward 7 the ticket was split, John H. Girvin winning a place over Joseph F. Peabody of the regulars.

WARD 6 WILDLY CELEBRATES WHEN FITZGERALD WINS

Ward 6 went wild as the returns began to show that the favorite son of the ward, John F. Fitzgerald, was winning the Democratic nomination and when the official result was made known there was no holding the crowds upon the streets. A cheer went up that fairly split the city.

The Jefferson Club at the corner of Hanover and Charter streets was the centre of jollification and from there it radiated throughout the ward and, indeed, through the entire North End. Nothing could be heard except cheers for Fitzgerald in a continuous roar. Mr. Fitzgerald did not appear, but several of his workers in the ward were in the Jefferson Club and when they appeared the crowd yelled itself hoarse.

Early in the evening Representative Thomas Grady started from the club in an automobile. He was followed by three carriages in which were a number of Fitzgerald workers in the ward. Almost instantly hundreds of men and boys fell in line back of the carriages and an impromptu procession was on. As if by magic red torches and transparencies appeared, several wagons of every description were pressed into service and a parade of the ward began.

As the parade moved down Hanover street, up North, back to Hanover, through North Bennet, and around through numerous other streets of the region, the whole vicinity was filled with cheering people. Every window in every tenement house had from six to a dozen heads sticking out of it, joining in the cheering, and as the procession moved on its ranks swelled with newcomers from all sides. Electric cars and other vehicles were held up until it passed.

After a turn lasting about an hour around the district the carriages drove away, as many as could conveniently get into the rooms at the Jefferson Club spent the remainder of the evening there.

Popular Choice Approves the Awards to Bostonian's Splendid Stable.

Mrs. Gerken Second at End of Third Day With Seven Blues to Credit.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Eben D. Jordan of Boston, with three days of the annual horse show in Madison Square Garden over, stands at the head of the list of prize winners, with eight blue ribbons to his credit. Mrs. John Gerken of this city is second, with seven blue ribbons, while Judge William H. Moore of Chicago and H. N. Main of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., are tied for third honors, with six blue ribbons each. Alfred Vanderbilt has won five blue ribbons and Reginald Vanderbilt has captured but one first honor.

Forest King, Judge Moore's brown gelding, which won the Waldorf-Astoria prize of $500 in Wednesday night's competition for gig horses, took the $750 Martinique challenge plate in the same class from virtually the same field. C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore was second.

At the afternoon session, starting with a fine class of harness horses, over 15.2 hands and not exceeding 16 hands, the judges selected Lawrence Jones's St. Louis winner, Gallant Lad, for premier honors, but to the majority of onlookers the coveted honor seemed to rest between E. D. Jordan's Lord Burleigh, which was second, and J. H. Moore's Harold II., the recipient of third honors.

Ponies held the stage in the early morning session. The first to appear were the two stallions, Belham Prime Minister, the wonderful brown horse who has won so many honors for E. D. Jordan, and T. L. Katts's Black Mac. They had to be shown with three of their get, and Mr. Jordan's famous little chap won easily with the aid of the great little winner, Lady Doris's Tangerine and Nellie.

E. D. Jordan's Lady Kitty was judged the best of the brood mares limited to 14.2. She is spirited and beautifully modelled. Mrs. Gerken was second with Solitaire. Mrs. E. F. Hawley's Western winner, Rivesay of Pittsford, was the pick of the Shetland stallions.

GIRLS PLAN TO HAZE BAY STATE WOMAN

DENVER, Col., Nov. 17.—Inmates of the Colorado Girls' Industrial School, a reformatory for incorrigible girls, have plotted to haze Miss Gertrude Smith, who is coming from the Massachusetts Industrial School for Girls at Lancaster, that State, to be superintendent of the Colorado school. The plan is to precipitate a riot and attack Miss Smith at supper time within a few days after reaching the school. Personal precautions are being taken to thwart the plot.

DIARY OF A MASSACRE

Four Days' Carnage in Odessa Described in Letters by an Eye-Witness.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The most vivid account of the four days' massacre of Jews in Odessa that has yet come to this city is contained in the diary of a Jewish merchant which has just been received at the office of the Jewish Morning Journal. The four days' carnage which made Odessa a city of horrors is described in detail. Translation of the diary follows:

"NOVEMBER 1.—It is impossible to describe all we have experienced in the past two days of the revolution. Now, when the happy moment of Russia's deliverance has come, Odessa is still in turmoil. The former police who have been deposed wreak a terrible vengeance in shooting in the streets, especially at Jews. Half an hour ago my life was in danger. While riding in a droshky a former policeman shot at me, but I was miraculously saved.

"Shooting is heard everywhere by militia composed of several thousands of young men, mostly students, who are firing at the former police. The Provisional Committee masters the situation temporarily.

Buried in One Grave.

"The funerals of the heroes who fell yesterday and the day before in the struggle for Russia's freedom are now taking place. They are mostly Jews. They are being buried in the Fraternal Cemetery all in one grave, and the city will erect a monument in their memory.

"Since the French Revolution no nation has lived through what we are experiencing now.

"P. S.—What a bitter error I made in expressing my joy at the beginning of my letter. Only three hours after writing the above, thousands of victims fell. The priests are inciting the populace against the Jews. Another Kishineff has begun.

"Rifle shooting is heard not far from us. We expect a St. Bartholomew's night.

"A few hours ago a meeting of Christian workingmen belonging to various socialist organizations consolidated with the Jewish Self-Defense, and organized themselves into a local militia, which somewhat relieved the tension.

"But of what good is it when the Cossacks are permitted by the authorities and are firing into houses? Among the dead and injured are police inspectors and policemen. Complete anarchy reigns throughout the city, and the Government officials have become the leaders of the Jew killers.

"Nov. 2.—It's awful. We lived through a dreadful night. Until 4 o'clock volleys rang out all over the city. The rumor current last night that martial law was declared seems to be true, because at dawn the massacre of Jews was renewed. They are now pillaging the Deribasnaky (the Broad or Odessa) street, the direction of the Cossacks, who are driving back the Self-Defense, in order that the hooligans may pursue their bloody work without hindrance.

"At the university there are gathered over a thousand armed students of the militia, but the place has been surrounded by soldiers and artillery, who are keeping them prisoners.

"November 3.—This is the fourth day of the dreadful destruction, and no description is in sight. The mental strain defies description.

"I am living in the Hotel Bristol. The owner, a Christian, will not accommodate any more Jews, although he has plenty vacant rooms. Even for 100 rubles per day he will not allow another Jew in his place. He keeps room for me and my together eight persons, my son and the family of my nephew.

Thousands Saw Slaughter.

"At this moment they are pillaging Jacob Perlman's place of business. Soldiers carry their rifles in one hand and packs of loot in the other. Officers escort them with a joyous laughter.

"Just at this moment there ran into the hotel Dr. Greenfeld in his Red Cross uniform. He could just utter a cry, 'Brother, I had to flee from the hospital because I am a Jew,' and immediately he fell unconscious.

"We are prisoners in the hotel. We are at a loss about the fate of our nearest relatives.

"Chief of Police Neidhardt is issuing circulars in which he insults the Jewish population. I inclose one of them. Of the Jewish Self-Defense' there is not a trace left. They were disgraced and slaughtered before the eyes of thousands of persons. A student who was pursued by the hooligans fell right above my room. The police and soldiers then transported the injured to the hospital. It happened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon in the glare of the sun, in a city where there are Consulates of all civilized countries.

"Dr. Greenfeld just now came to, and he told me that he has been serving for twenty years in the Red Cross Hospital. The attendants and the Sisters of Mercy are all Christians. When the Jewish dead and injured were brought there they were horribly maltreated. The Russian and murderers, however, were treated with the utmost tenderness and care.

Hospitals Crowded.

"This morning the attendants of the hospital met and decided to kill all the Jewish doctors, acusing them falsely of treating the hooligans in an unfriendly manner. The chief surgeon acquiesced in this, and Dr. Greenfeld escaped with difficulty.

"To the hospitals are constantly brought Jewish killed and wounded. When Gentiles are brought, including old men of seventy and their grandchildren, of only two years.

"On the Medvenska (the tough neighborhood of the city) a band of cutthroats are ravaging, and several days since one Jewish soul alive. They are mutilating the dead and are firing on the Red Cross ambulances who attempt to remove the Jewish dead and wounded.

"NOVEMBER 4.—The massacre seem to have ended. Only last night the following dispatch came from the Czar to Baron Kaulbars: 'Suppress with all means.'

"There was no need for even one shot or lash of the Cossack's whip to restrain the murderers. One word from Chief of Police Neidhardt was sufficient to restore order at once. Several Jews killed and injured is estimated at 10,000 on both sides.

"The crucifixes were a hundred-fold more than in Kishineff. There is no consolation, however, in this terrible coloring. In Kishineff only the high sheep, but in Odessa they fought like heroes on a battlefield. The Jewish youth fought to death. Maccabeeusus of old, and there is no doubt but for the assistance of the police and Cossacks, the assailants of the Jews would have been wiped out in the first two hours.

"Two Sisters of Mercy went through witnessing the terrible deeds of the murderers. Children were riddled with bullets and their limbs torn asunder. An ambulance of the Red Cross carrying an injured Jew was attacked by the hooligans, and the injured man was seized and dragged to death.

"Trains having on board fleeing Jews were stopped on the line, and the defenseless Jews were slaughtered. Chief of Police Neidhart sent to the editors of Odessa newspapers and forbade them to write otherwise than as he dictated. The editors declined him and decided not to publish their papers at all if they could not be permitted to tell the truth."

additional loan privileges to facilitate the purchase of lands by peasants. The taxation of the richer classes will aggregate $40,000,000.

As the result of the rumor on the Bourse that the Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievitch, commander of the Imperial Guard, had been appointed military dictator, there was a stampede of holders of industrial stocks, who hastened to unload.

Government lotteries fell 25 points to 400 and general list dropped to 85½, a fall of four points from the highest point during the war.

M. Vouich, chief of Premier Witte's chancellery, authorized the rumor.

Sailors Threaten Mutiny.

According to reports from Sevastopol the situation among the crews of the warships in the harbor is extremely precarious. There are 15,000 sailors at Sevastopol, and they threaten to inaugurate a general mutiny. Admiral Chuknin, commander of the Black Sea fleet, has requested that 3,000 additional troops be sent to Sevastopol to reinforce the garrison there and preserve order.

A censored telegram sent from Vladivostok under date of November 15, was made public today. It states that half of the town was burned during the recent outbreak there. Many houses in the best quarter of the city were pillaged by rioters, and acts of violence committed against women and children, many of whom were killed or wounded.

A false Emperor has suddenly made his appearance near Penza, and already his followers number 50,000, ⅞ the startling report received this afternoon from Simbirsk, Asiatic uprisings on a large scale have been occurring there and if the report turns out to be true the government will raise a force besides its other troubles, a formidable Agrarian rebellion. It required a year to suppress the famous rebellion led by Pugatcheff, who impersonated the dethroned and murdered Peter III. in the time of Catherine II. That uprising was started in the same region.

Extreme pessimism is the note of the moment in official circles. At present the general strike is interpreted as meaning that a revolution and not a constitution is aimed at.

Witte May Resign.

Simultaneously come persistent reports that Count Witte is desirous of resigning while most of the peaceful members of the unions declare that he cannot possibly succeed, his position being hopelessly compromised.

Another report runs that the officers of the guard petitioned the Czar to rescind his offer of a constitution, undertaking to suppress disorders which might follow. Such a course would surely set Russia in a flame of revolution from one end to the other. The Moscow railroad closed on Saturday, leaving the Finnish line alone open. A service of automobiles to the Finnish frontier to carry the mails is talked of.

The official Gazette is filled with dull shaves, and has no telegraph news. This is the only paper published, as M. Petern burg is quite ignorant of the affairs of the outer world. The telegraphers are still bonding, but only on conditions that their pay be augmented when the general situation becomes better. They may quit work at any moment.

time of the contributions made by the Equitable Life Assurance Society for campaign purposes, political purposes?"

"In a general way," replied Mr. Depew. "I did not know that $50,000 was contributed in 1904."

"I did not. I had a general idea that there was a contribution, but I did not know the amount."

Said Back to Society.

Justice Ransome, of the State Supreme Court, representing George H. Squire, was called, and explained that Mr. Squire was very ill, and it was arranged that his deposition should be taken. As to some of the financial transactions of Mr. Squire, the stenographic said that he himself was qualified to speak for the absent invalid. He was ready, for instance, to tell about the deal in 2,000 shares of Lawyers' Title Insurance Company stock bought at $174 a share by the Equitable in March, 1901, of which 1,100 shares were sold to Mr. Squire at the purchase price. Mr. Squire later resolding them to the society at prices ranging up to $250 a share.

Millions Loaned to Clerks.

John Gilchrist, in charge of the security department of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, told of millions of dollars in loans made at the end of the year in the names of clerks of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., to keep with the law that the surplus should be invested or to keep down the cash balances.

No collateral was held by the Equitable on those loans, and the check which was given for those loans was deposited in the bank and a certificate of deposit received. The check, however, was never cleared and on the first of the year the checks would be taken out and the certificate surrendered. Those loans were made at the instance of P. H. Jordan, former comptroller of the Equitable.

M'CURDY CUTS OWN SALARY AND ORDERS OTHERS REDUCED

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—At a special meeting of the board of trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, at which a preliminary report of the recently appointed special investigation committee was submitted, President Richard A. McCurdy announced the offer by himself that at his own request his salary had been cut in half, from $150,000 to $75,000 a year. This action was taken at a meeting of the finance committee, and Mr. McCurdy said it was the first step in reducing the expenses of the company.

Salaries of the other executive officers of the company also have been reduced, the saving amounting all told to between $145,000 and $150,000 per annum.

The committee made a significant request for a broadening of its powers and recommended changes in practices by the company "which on their very face are loose, unsound and open to criticism."

The preliminary report was adopted, together with the resolution increasing the powers of the committee in continuing its investigations.

The principal reform demanded was the reduction in the cost of insurance. Commission agencies will be changed to a salary basis, and legislative expenses will be done away with, political agents and publicity committees taking the places of salaried officials.

President McCurdy said, relative to profits: "If one thing I feel certain, that no officer or trustee of this company has made any unlawful profit out of his office."

DARING GIRL OF 15 CLIMBS TO TOP OF 175-FOOT CHIMNEY

GRISELLA HELD

GIRL WHO ASCENDED 175-FOOT CHIMNEY.

Jokingly Dared by Father to Make Attempt She Makes Ascent and Plants Stars and Stripes at the Top.

Special to the Boston American.

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov. 17.—"Oh, pshaw, I'd just as soon do it again as not. I don't know why, but I don't seem to mind those things like some girls, and then they make a big fuss about nothing and say how brave I am."

This was the startling statement made by nervy little Griselia Held, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Machinist Alfred Held of the Springfield Manufacturing Company of Rockville, after she had successfully accomplished the seemingly foolhardy feat of scaling the narrow ladder which towers up 175 feet inside the new concrete chimney of the company.

Alfred Held, who is one of the under superintendents of the company's plant, never dreaming she would take him up, jokingly dared his daughter just after the staging had been removed from the chimney, with: "Now you wish that you could climb that ladder to the top, Griselia?"

The only reply of the girl was to skip to the foot of the slim iron ladder, which is fastened about four inches from the inside surface of the chimney. Before her amazed father or any of her companions could interfere, she was safely up a sufficient distance to preclude any practical thwarting of her resolution to gain the top.

One by one the small half-inch rungs of the skeleton ladder were grasped by the delicate white hands, and, never faltering once in the perilous ascent, with eyes strained toward the top, she mounted upward so steadily, and yet seemingly so slowly that it appeared to the anxious ones gathered below that she would never reach the top of the stack.

Griselle had a small flag gripped tightly in her teeth, and as soon as her father recovered from his momentary cons of fright and horror, he started upward after his daughter. Griselle had securely planted the emblem of her country in the masonry at the top, when her father arrived breathless at the top. Both rested a moment and then together began the descent and reached the ground quickly, amid the plaudits of the crowd of townsfolk who had gathered.

MOTHER LIES ON BIER; GIRL WEDS

Father Buried Two Days; Maternal Parent Unburied; Woman Becomes Bride.

GROOM IS "SON OF EARL"

With her father's funeral only two days past, and that of her mother about to take place, Mabel W. Kennieston, a pretty twenty-two-year-old girl of Medfield, became the bride of Robert A. Dobyns, who claims to be the disinherited son of an English earl. The couple are said to be now in this city, where they came on their honeymoon, after making arrangements for the funeral of the bride's mother. Mrs. Dobyns is said to be critically ill.

For a year Dobyns was clerk in the grocery store of her father at Attleboro. He had come to Medfield from Canada, where he first met Miss Kennieston while she was visiting there with her mother. He is thirty years of age and good-looking.

When he proposed marriage it is said the match was approved by the young woman's parents. A sister was strongly opposed to it. Two weeks ago, while Mrs. Kennieston was lying critically ill with pneumonia, she expressed the desire to have the marriage between her daughter and Dobyns take place without delay. After an illness of two days her husband succumbed to the same disease with which she was suffering. Mrs. Kennieston died Tuesday four hours later.

In her bereavement Miss Kennieston yielded to the urgent demands of her fiance, and, while her mother was lying dead at Rome, the couple were married by Pastor Williams, of the Medfield Baptist Church. Arrangements were then made with Undertaker A. B. Parker for the mother's burial, and the couple left on their honeymoon.

"MRS. DEAN" ACCUSED IN NEW SUIT CASE CRIME CONFESSION

little from that made to the Boston police some time ago. The men and details which will be valuable to the police in their work of ridding the city of the murder dens, which Captain Laurence Cain has been driving from his district by sensational raids.

The men say they are familiar with the practices in almost every murder den in Boston. They have told how operations in the Bishop office were performed. They say that now they are caught and there is no avenue of escape for them, they intend to confess to everything they know, and let others in their nefarious business get out of trouble the best they know how.

On their arrival in Boston the men were rushed to police headquarters. They were closeted for a time in the superintendent's office. Hunt almost collapsed, and required the attention of Dr. Inman, the police physician. Crawford seemed quite chipper and glad to get back to Boston.

Hunt, which he says is his right name, says that he came to Boston from Philadelphia shortly after the death in that city of Miss Maud Gilpin, a society woman of the Quaker city. Her death created a sensation, and caused the exposure of Philadelphia to drive out most of the notorious malpractitioners in the city. Hunt then came to Boston and resumed work with the Dr. Bishop offices.

Implicate Mrs. Dean.

He said in confession that he and Crawford were not present at the operation on Miss Geary. They say that Mrs. Mary S. Dean, who was in charge of the office at the time, and who subsequently was at the house at No. 48 Winthrop street, Roxbury, in which Miss Geary died, is in all probability the woman who performed the first operation on the girl. They cling to their story that Dr. Percy D. McLeod, now under imitvtment, was the physician who performed the abdominal operation in an effort to save the girl's life, and who also dismembered the body of the girl and directed what size of suit cases to buy.

They say that Dr. McLeod and Mrs. Dean advised them to take the suit cases on the Portland boat and drop them off while at sea, but that they were in too great a hurry to take the advice of the couple.

Hunt says that another physician besides those already mentioned attended Miss Geary while she was at the house in Roxbury. He says that the first operation was not an unskilful one, and that had the physician who attended the girl at the Roxbury house used ordinary care septic poisoning would not have set in and the girl would have recovered. When this carelessness resulted in the poisoning, the physicians declared upon an exploratory inparotomy, which Hunt says was performed by Drs. McLeod and Petitel.

Girl Asked Mrs. Dean to Pray.

Hunt declared that he was not present at the first operation on Miss Geary. He says this operation occurred September 9, in the afternoon, and that on that day he was employed as a supernumary with "The Shepherd King" company, then playing at a Boston theatre.

Both men say that they were never in the house no Winthrop street before the time they went there to get the dress suit cases containing the dismembered body of the girl. They say they do not know the name of the nurse who assisted Mrs. Dean at the house. They recall the death scene, and say that Miss Geary requested Mrs. Dean and the nurse to pray for her. The two women knelt beside the dying girl's cot, and repeated a prayer. Then Miss Geary asked for a drink of water. This was given her, and two minutes later life had departed.

The nurse is alleged to have become frightened when the girl died, and was going to leave the employ of Mrs. Dean immediately. Hunt says Mrs. Dean pacified her by telling her that she (Mrs. Dean) knew the mother of the girl, and would settle the case with her by paying $1000.

The police are confident that the two men are doing all in their power to clear up the circumstances connected with the case. "I believe they have told the truth," said Superintendent Pierce in talking about the men. "They have added certain details to the confessions they made a short time ago. I believe we have a complete case."

Both men were taken to the Tombs from headquarters.

MRS. STONE HELD IN $6,000 IN CAUSING MRS. ALLEN'S DEATH

Mrs. Sarah A. Stone has been held for the December sitting of the grand jury in $6000 bonds by Judge Bennett, on the charge of performing a criminal operation on Mrs. Elsie E. Allen of Winthrop, from the effects of which she died. Mrs. Annie Brown is now serving a five years' sentence for connection with Mrs. Allen's death.

Mrs. Stone has been out on bonds of the same amount, furnished by Robert Connelly of Nahant, but they will have to be renewed, and meanwhile she is held in custody.

Mrs. Brown, sometimes known as Mrs. Jane Catherine Lewis, was the principal witness for the government at the trial.

Mrs. Brown said that she worked as an assistant at the office of Mrs. Dr. Bishop on Tremont street for five weeks, beginning in December; that her duties were to see all of the patients, talk with them, make arrangements for the operation, take the money from them, and then assist at the operation.

She said the defendant, known as "Dr." Stone, performed the operation on Mrs. Allen.

Dr. Henderson's name was mentioned, and E. P. Barry, counsel for defence, asked her why she spoke of Dr. Henderson. She said that he was her superior in the place. She stated that she never saw Mrs. Dr. Bishop in her life.

She said that her husband was a student at the college of osteopathy and was not a doctor.

$5,000,000 HEIRESS LOST

Chicago Girl With Fortune Seen Wandering About the Streets, Exhausted.

HAS ACTED PECULIARLY

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—An heiress to $5,000,000, sixteen-year-old Dorothy Carter, who disappeared two weeks ago from her temporary home at No. 1,716 Michigan avenue, has been seen wandering about the streets in an exhausted condition. She is the daughter of President M. F. Carter of the Second National Bank, Colorado Springs, Col.

Her neat shoe soft, spattered with mud, and the picture hat of blue velvet trimmed with a white feather, replaced by a cheap black fascinator folded in front her head, she presented a pitiable spectacle. The young girl is thought to be suffering from a relapse of a mental derangement that followed an attack of typhoid fever three years ago.

This is her second disappearance within five weeks. She returned the first time after twenty-four hours absence.

This time her sister, Mabel Carter, graduate of a Chicago law school, has become alarmed for Dorothy's safety and the police have been requested to search for her. Information has been received by them that on November 1 she pawned a diamond ring worth $150 for $10, with the same of the money to some children who were watching her through the store window. She appeared to be laboring under great excitement.

John Dugen, a bartender, saw her meet a man on a street corner and walk off with him. The police are trying to locate this man.

CONSERVATORY JOINS HARVARD

Arrangements have been completed between Harvard University and the New England Conservatory of Music by which a definite reciprocal relation has been established. These arrangements, which have been ratified by the corporation and faculty of Harvard and the president and board of trustees of the conservatory, provide on the part of the conservatory for the admission of properly qualified students of the Harvard music department, not only into the conservatory or orchestra and chorus, but also into its courses in ensemble playing, chamber music and in music training and liturgical music.

In return for these opportunities Harvard University offers to properly qualified students of the conservatory the privileges of attending certain of its own courses; among these, courses in English, French and German literature, English composition, fine arts, physics and public speaking.

HARVARD MEN ON OWNERSHIP

Municipal ownership will be the theme for discussion at the debate of the Harvard Debating Club in the Harvard Union, Monday night. The students will debate upon the following:

"Resolved: That municipal ownership as outlined by the Hearst ticket would be for the best interests of New York."

The affirmative will be taken by E. R. Kannaley and H. B. Shipard, while the negative will be in the hands of L. L. Hale and J. S. Davis.

MRS. JACK GARDNER'S PALACE EXHIBIT

Mrs. John L. Gardner has decided to extend the sale of tickets for admission to Fenway Court until Tuesday, November 28. The demand for tickets has been beyond expectation.

The statement that Mrs. Gardner will close the palace to the public because she was compelled to pay heavy taxes on the foreign art objects which she has placed in the palace, is premature.

NEWTON NURSE WEDS WEALTHY EX-OFFICIAL

Ex-Mayor Began His Wooing in Greater Boston Hospital.

Miss Laura Banning Noyes, a trained nurse, who graduated from the Newton Hospital, who, while there, roomed with two very prominent Newton Highlands families, is to-day the bride of former Mayor Robert C. Davidson of Baltimore. The couple are in New York. Mrs. Davidson is well known in Boston.

This is the last chapter of the sensational story in which these people have figured. According to dispatches from New York to the BOSTON AMERICAN, the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. A. Lincoln Moore, was a private one, only the sister and two brothers of the bride being present.

While at the hospital at Newton and after she had graduated and taken up private nursing, Miss Noyes frequently had as a visitor the former chief executive of Baltimore. She frequently told her friends of his infatuation for her. Mr. Davidson was not seen in Newton after Miss Noyes went to Baltimore, where she took a course at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The infatuation of Mr. Davidson for Miss Noyes was known to his wife. He was 55 years old; Miss Noyes is but 32; Mrs. Davidson is about 50. Shortly after Miss Noyes went to Baltimore she and the former Mayor were seen together frequently in public places. Finally, Mr. Davidson disposed of all his real and personal property and made a hurried trip to Europe. About the same time Miss Noyes left the city.

A suit for divorce was instituted by Mrs. Davidson, and last week a divorce was granted. She was allowed $50,000 alimony.

Following the decree came the announcement of the marriage of the ex-Mayor and Miss Noyes. He was very prominent in the religious, social and financial circles of his native city. According to his divorced wife he met his present bride at Nantucket while she was there nursing a patient. When Miss Noyes went South she made her home with her mother at Port Deposit, Md.

The present Mrs. Davidson is tall, slender, graceful and a brunette with striking black eyes. Her husband is erect, gray and about six feet tall.

'MONEYSTAINED WITH THE BLOOD OF HOMESTEAD'

Federation Delegates Refuse Frick's $100 and $1,000 From Non-Union Papers.

By Frank K. Foster

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—"It is money stained with the blood of Homestead," dramatically declared Delegate Johnson, in the Federation convention, when the question was brought up of the acceptance of the $100 donated by H. C. Frick to the local entertainment committee.

So strong was the sentiment aroused that the committee returned the donation, together with the $1,000 from the non-union newspaper combine for the same purpose.

The major portion of the forenoon session of the Federation convention was devoted to listening to the addresses of the fraternal delegates from Great Britain and Canada. Delegate Moss, of the British Trades Congress, gave an exhaustive review of the work of that body, which now embraces over 1,600,000, an increase of half a million in the last ten years.

Since the repeal of the conspiracies act in 1871 steady legislative progress has been made in factory acts, sanitation, inspection, abolition of overtime and mine regulations. Present issues to the fore are the trades disputes acts and workmen's compensation amendments. He expressed himself as of the opinion that the compulsory arbitration act of New Zealand was not a success.

His colleague, Delegate Elmore of the miners, said that that craft alone would nominate candidates for twenty parliamentary seats in the forthcoming election, and that over seventy candidates would be put forward by the trades union movement in Great Britain.

Delegate Duncan of Quincy corrected a misapprehension which existed in the minds of the British delegates that Massachusetts had a form of compulsory arbitration and informed the convention that such was not the case, and that the sentiment of trade unions of the Bay State was strongly against it.

A dramatic incident occurred during this session, the draperies in the entrance to the hall catching fire and giving the appearance of a big blaze. Trade union discipline showed itself, for under President Gompers's command, scarcely a delegate started from his seat while the flames were being extinguished.

COLLEGE CUTS FOOTBALL.

IDAHO, Neb., Nov. 17.—The students of the Nebraska Central College have decided by a unanimous vote to eliminate football from the list of college sports.

RULERS OF THE WORLD.

Meat Eating Nations Are the Leaders in Every Branch of Human Achievements.

The ruling nations of the world are meat eaters and history records that they always have been.

Vegetarians and food cranks may explain this in any way they choose, but the facts remain that the Americans, English, French, Russians and Germans are meat-eating nations, and they are also the most energetic and most progressive.

The principal food of the heroic Boer soldier, known as Biltong, is a sort of dried beef, affording a great deal of nourishment in a highly concentrated form.

The weak races of people are the rice-eating Chinese, Hindoos, and Siamese, regarded since the dawn of history as non-progressive, superstitious and inferior physically and mentally to the meat-eating nations who dominate them.

The structure of the teeth plainly indicates that human beings should subsist upon a variety of food, meat, fruit and grains, and it is unhygienic to confine one's diet to any one of those classes to the exclusion of another.

Meat is the most concentrated and most easily digested of foods, but our manner of living is often so unnatural that the digestive organs refuse to properly digest meat, eggs and similar nutritious and wholesome food, but it is not because such food is unwholesome, but the real reason is that the stomach lacks, from disease or weakness, some necessary digestive element; hence arising indigestion and, later on, chronic dyspepsia.

Nervous people should eat plenty of meat, convalescents should make meat the principal food, hard-working people have to do so, and brain-workers and office men should eat, not so much meat, but at least once a day, and to insure its perfect digestion one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should be taken after each meal, because they supply the peptones, diastase and fruit acids, lacking in every case of stomach trouble.

Nervous dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, gastritis, sour stomach, gas and acidity are only different names for indigestion, the failure to digest wholesome food, and the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cures them all because, by affording perfect digestion the stomach has a chance to rest and recover its natural tone and vigor.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the real household medicine; it is as safe and pleasant for the stomach ache of the baby as it is for the imperfect digestion of its grand sire.

They are not a cathartic, but a digestive, and no pill habit can ever follow their use; the only habit Stuart's Tablets induce is the habit of good digestion and consequently good health.

CLERGY WOULD CLEANSE SALEM

SALEM, Nov. 17.—"If the officials will swear in as special deputies twenty or twenty-five of us, give us a 'free hand and promise to resign if we clean the city, we might be persuaded to take the job for a while," said Rev. Dr. A. A. Berle, in a sermon in which he scored the city officials for negligence in enforcing the law.

Sunday Rev. Dr. Alexander Blackburn announced that the fault was attributable to the Mayor, city marshal and district attorney. A day later the charges were supplemented by Rev. Dr. Dewitt S. Clark, and now Rev. Dr. Adolph A. Berle states that the no-license law the present year has been in the hands of men who, with respect to that question, were substantially outlaws.

They swore to enforce the laws, but made an exception of the no-license law. License people are laughing over the situation and temperance advocates are emphatic in their condemnation of affairs.

"Salem ought to vote 'No' by 1,000 majority this year," he said, "to prove that it is a community of laws. If we have got to have as officials men who need nursing bottles on the subject of law enforcement to keep them strong enough to remember that an oath to support and enforce the laws of the community does not carry with it discretion as to which laws they are going to support and enforce, let us deal with that fact and hire nurses."

LOSE FIGHT ON $100,000 WILL

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The long and bitter legal fight made by Jerome Tinney of Adams, Mass., and Lyman Tinney of Wisconsin, brothers of the late Mary J. Anthony of Adams, to secure annulment of the legacy of $100,000 left by her to George K. Staples of this city, has finally been decided by the courts in Staples' favor.

Suit had been brought to have the will set aside on the grounds of undue influence and incompetency. The will had been probated in Massachusetts as well as in this State. An unsuccessful effort was made by the brothers to have the case tried in the former State.

FIRE DESTROYS HOLYOKE HOTEL

HOLYOKE, Nov. 17.—The entire fire department was called out for a fire in the Hotel Kraig at the corner of Appleton and Newton streets. When the firemen arrived smoke was pouring from all the windows on the first floor and a lively blaze was located in the basement.

Mrs. Onesine Viens, who had charge of the dining room, was taken from the building by firemen. The guests got out safely. Fireman John Wynn received a shock from a hose nozzle coming in contact with a live wire.

"THE FLAMING PHANTOM"

How Does "The Thinking Machine" Solve This Ghost Story?

Begin To-day to Read the Latest of the "Thinking Machine" Mystery Stories. On Saturday You Can Guess the Solution, and May Win One of the Prizes Offered.

The third of a series of mysteries which come under the observation of Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen, Ph. D., LL. D., etc., etc., so-called.

"The Thinking Machine,"

By

Jacques Futrelle.

Synopsis of Preceding Part.

HUTCHINSON HATCH, reporter, is sent to investigate the story of a ghost in an old house on the South Shore. He lingers in the house, a roomy structure of two stories, which has been standing for sixty or seventy years and has been uncoccupied for five years. It is owned by Ernest Weston, a state street financier, who inherited it from his father.

After an inspection of the house Hatch makes some inquiries and finds that several workmen, sent there to make repairs and alterations in view of Weston's prospective marriage to Miss Katherine Everard, daughter of a banker, remained only one night, when they saw an apparition and left next day. This is described to Hatch as a flaming figure with a dagger. That night, with the purpose of writing a Sunday story, Hatch goes into the deserted house to see the ghost. He arrives there at 9 o'clock. About 11 o'clock he leaves, running, with terror-stricken face, and sits in his room at the village hotel all the remainder of the night with his lamp lighted.

With the problem thus presented to him Hatch goes to see Professor Van Dusen, so called The Thinking Machine, whom he knows well and puts the matter before him. To The Thinking Machine he admits that he has been frightened, senselessly, of course, but frightened. This fright was due to the appearance before him of the Flaming Phantom, with upraised dagger, which writes in letters of white fire on the air.

The reporter also tells how, despite his fright, he rushed at the THING, and it disappeared. Later, he says, he found himself suddenly in another room, having run there in his rush, and the terror smashed a window and went out that way. The Thinking Machine asks many questions, among them whether or not Hatch smelled anything when the phantom appeared, also the condition of the photographers' plates. Hatch reports having seen in the house set in the walls.

That night the Flaming Phantom plays other tricks. The town entertains itself as it may other men, see the THING in front of the house and go toward it. The complexion threatens to shoot and the men around him, himself even, feel something warm spatter over them. It is blood. They flee in terror.

Hatch talks to Ernest Weston, owner of the property, and hears from Weston's cousin, George Weston, a story of a tragedy of forty years ago in the house; and also a story of $100,000 worth of missing jewels. Hatch had heard a rumor of this before. It seems that the great-grandfather of the present Westons had hidden the jewels, was set upon by a thief, killed the thief and was himself injured so that he died. The jewels were never found.

It also appears that Ernest Weston was at one time an ardent suitor for the hand of the girl whom Ernest Weston is to marry within a few months. She has inherited a fortune, but had dissipated it. This story, which is only told to himself by Ernest Weston, impresses him so that he decides to investigate the ghost's story. He invites George Weston to go along, but he declines, saying he is going to Providence to a ball.

Hatch, Ernest Weston and the town constable go to the haunted house to spend the night. Again the ghost appears and the three men run. They, despite a warning not to shoot, the constable fires at the ghost. The figure remains for an instant longer, there is a wild laugh and it disappears, fades away. The three men

The constable is certain that the bullet he fired passed through the THING, when over it is. Weston is determined to solve the mystery by keeping a close watch on things about the place, and sends down a fighting Irishman, O'Hegarty. Hatch, meanwhile tells The Thinking Machine of this latest adventure, and is advised to look up the handwriting of Ernest Weston, owner of the house. The Thinking Machine promises to go to the house with Hatch on Friday.

On the next day O'Hegan reports that he went down and saw the ghost; that he went all over the house with a lantern afterwards, seeking anything that might throw light on the matter, that he went to sleep in a barn on the property. He was awakened by a ghost-cat, which escapes. Again he goes to sleep, and next morning, when he awakes, finds himself bound hand and foot to his bed.

This part ends with The Thinking Machine on the scene. He wanders about, seemingly aimlessly; later tries to borrow a motor boat which might belong to Ernest or George Weston, and still later goes into the cellar of the house, with the avowed purpose of finding the jewels which have been lost for fifty years. He finds them, after a minute search, hidden behind a stone in the chimney base.

"Yes."

"Have you that handkerchief?"

"I suppose I might get it," was the doubtful reply. "It might have gone into the wash."

"Astute person," said The Thinking Machine. "There might have been a crime over there and you throw away the one thing which would indicate it—the blood stains."

The constable suddenly took notice.

"By ginger!" he said. "Wait here and I'll go see if I can find the handkerchief."

He disappeared and returned shortly with the handkerchief. There were half a dozen blood stains on it, now dark brown.

The Thinking Machine dropped into the village drug store and had a short conversation with the owner, after which he disappeared into the compounding room at the back of the store and remained for an hour or more—until darkness set in. Then he came out and joined Hatch, who with the constable had been waiting outside.

Hatch understood that there had been a blood test of some sort of the stains on the handkerchief, but the constable, he feared, would never understand, so no attempt was made to explain the matter to him.

The reporter did not ask any questions, and The Thinking Machine volunteered no information.

"Is it be late for anyone to get down from Boston to-night?" he asked the constable.

"No," was the reply. "He could take a 6 o'clock train and get here about half past nine."

"Mr. Hatch, will you wire to Mr. Weston—Ernest Weston—and ask him to come to-night, sure. Impress on him the fact that it is a matter of the greatest importance."

Instead of telegraphing, Hatch went into the telephone booth and spoke by long distance to Weston at his club. The trip would interfere with some other plans, the latter explained, but he would come. Hatch said nothing of the finding of the jewels.

The Thinking Machine had been conversing with the constable and had given some sort of directions which evidently amazed that official exceedingly, for he kept repeating "By ginger!" to himself with considerable fervor.

"And not one word or hint of it to anyone," said The Thinking Machine, "least of all to the members of your family."

"By ginger!" was the response, and the constable went to supper.

The Thinking Machine and Hatch had their supper thoughtfully that evening, in the little village hotel. Only once did Hatch break this silence, and then with a question.

"You told me to see Weston's handwriting," he said, "of course you knew he was with the constable and myself when we saw the THING, therefore it would have been impossible—"

"Nothing is impossible," snapped The Thinking Machine. "Don't say that please."

"I mean that as he was with us—"

"We'll end the ghost story to-night," said the scientist.

Ernest Weston arrived on the 9:30 train and had a long earnest conversation with The Thinking Machine, while Hatch was permitted to read his toes in solitude. At last the two men finished their conversation and moved over toward Hatch.

"Take a revolver by all means," said The Thinking Machine.

"Do you think that necessary?" asked Weston incredulously.

"It is—absolutely," was the emphatic response.

Weston left them after awhile and disappeared into the night. Hatch wondered where he had gone, but no information was forthcoming. In a general sort of way he knew that The Thinking Machine was to go to the haunted house, but he didn't know when. He didn't even know if he was to accompany him.

At last they started. The Thinking Machine swinging a hammer he had borrowed from his landlord. The night was perfectly black, even the road at their feet was invisible. They stumbled frequently before they looked at the cliff toward the house, dimly standing out against the sky. They entered by way of the kitchen, passed through to the stairs in the main hall, and there Hatch indicated in the darkness the spot from which he had twice seen the flaming phantom.

"You go in the drawing room behind here," The Thinking Machine instructed. "Don't make any noise whatever. This is necessary."

For hours they waited, neither seeing the other. Hatch heard his heart thumping heavily; if only he could see the other man; with an effort he recovered from a rapidly growing nervousness and waited. Suddenly The Thinking Machine sat perfectly right on the stair, the hammer in his right hand, and settled steadily through the darkness.

At last he heard a noise, a slight nothing. It might almost have been his imagination. It was as if something had glided across the floor, and he was more alert than ever. Then came the dread misty light in the reception hall, or was it the library? He could not say. All he looked, looked, with every sense alert.

Gradually the light grew and spread, a misty whiteness which was unmistakably light, but which did not illuminate anything around it. The Thinking Machine saw it without a tremor of a nerve; he was interested in this thing as a problem, therefore in saw things that others had not seen.

He saw this mistiness grow more marked in certain places, and these presently lines gradually grew into the figure of a person—a person who was the centre of a white light.

Then the mistiness fell away and The Thinking Machine saw the outline in bold relief. It was that of a tall figure, clothed in a robe, with head covered by a sort of hood, also luminous. As The Thinking Machine looked he saw an arm raised, and in the hand he saw a dagger, also luminous. The attitude of the figure was distinctly a threat. And yet The Thinking Machine had not begun to grow nervous; he was only interested.

Then, as he looked, the other hand of the apparition was raised and seemed to point directly at him. It moved through the air in bold sweeps and The Thinking Machine saw the word "Death" written in air luminously, standing before his eyes.

Then he blinked his eyes incredulously. There came a wild, demoniacal shriek of laughter from somewhere. It did not stir The Thinking Machine's blood—he merely wondered what it was.

Then slowly the scientist crept down the steps in his stocking feet, as silent as the apparition itself, with the hammer still in his right hand. He crept on, on toward the figure. Still he had made no sound. Still the figure stood pointing in him; the mystic writing floated in the air.

Hatch, not knowing the movements of The Thinking Machine, stood waiting for something, he didn't know what.

Then the thing he had been waiting for happened. There was a sudden loud clatter as of broken glass falling, the phantom and writing faded, crumbled up, disappeared, and somewhere in the old house there was the hurried sound of steps. At last the mystery would his name called quietly. Unmistakably it was the voice of The Thinking Machine.

"Mr. Hatch, come here."

The reporter started, blundering through the darkness toward the point whence the voice has come. Something swept down upon him resistlessly; a crushing blow descended on his head, vivid lights danced before his eyes. He fell. After awhile, from a great distance it seemed, he heard faintly a pistol shot.

WOMAN TELLS OF AWFUL NIGHT ON SINKING SHIP

At Mercy of Wind and Waves, Captain Lashed to Wheel and Crew to Deckhouse.

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 17.—After a fearful experience on a sinking vessel, on which for many hours she stood almost up to her neck in water from the foaming seas, Mrs. William F. Davis, wife of the captain of the schooner James Parker, has so far recovered as to be able to tell her story.

Mrs. Davis was brought to this city on the tug Sollctor after being on the Parker twenty-four hours, during which time the 1365-ton vessel, with pumps out of order, was at the mercy of wind and waves. The captain and her two seamen were lashed to the wheel and the deckhouse, while Mrs. Davis was confined in the cabin.

Says Mrs. Davis' story, as told to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"We were bound from Bangor, Me., for Port Chester, N. Y., with lumber. We left Indian Haven about ten o'clock Tuesday night and had head winds all the time. Finding that he could not make any headway, Captain Davis attempted to put into Newport harbor. It was not until Wednesday afternoon, about two o'clock, that the vessel became almost unmanageable. The wind was blowing a hurricane, the waves were mountain high, and we were shipping seas almost every moment.

"I was seasick in the bunk in the cabin Wednesday afternoon, when I heard my husband call out: 'All hands to the pumps.' I jumped out of the berth and made for one of the pumps to help do what I could to save the boat, when I found the pump out of order.

"I looked back in the cabin and saw it was fast filling with water. Then I began to lose my nerve. I screamed: 'Oh, my God, we are gone!'

"I thought it was to be another case like that of the wrecked Hesperus.

"I then heard Captain Davis order Emanuel Fernando, a Portugese sailor, to haul in the main sheet, but the Portuguese, with an oath, said he was going to take to the rigging.

"Then Charley Miller, the other sailor, told me to keep cool. But how could I when I was in water up to my neck. The big wave came very near washing Captain Davis overboard and then he ordered the men to tie themselves to the deckhouse. This they did and he lashed himself to the wheel.

"Finally we sighted the tug Sollctor and the United States torpedo boat Dahlgren. Captain Davis remained at the wheel while the tug towed us in port, after the sailors and myself had been taken on board the Sollctor.

Mrs. Davis was taken to the home of Captain Chamberlain where she was furnished dry clothes. She then went to the home of W. J. Littlefield, a cousin of Captain Davis, at No. 36 Extension street, where she now is. She is gradually recovering from her experience, but says she will never forget them in her life.

BRAKES DIDN'T WORK; PASSENGERS HURT

EAST BRIDGEWATER, Nov. 1.—As a car from Whitman took the curve near the railroad bridge the brakes refused to work and about sixty passengers were thrown around the car. Harry Leland was thrown from the car, sustaining severe bruises and possible internal injuries. Miss Hattie Miller had her wrist sprained. Edwin Reynolds, of Bridgewater, sustained a sprained wrist. The car was in charge of Conductor Conn and Motorman Mullaney.

PLAYED SAMARITAN; ROBBED FOR PAINS

LAWRENCE, Nov. 17.—Eugene Riley of Littleton, N. H., charged in the police court that after playing the part of the host and giving money to men with which to procure food for the night he was set upon by them and robbed of his money and watch. The defendants were Joseph McCarthy, William McCarthy and Jeremiah Sweeney. McCarthy declared that he could prove an alibi and his case was continued. The other two defendants were held for the grand jury in $500 each.

HOSPITAL FIRE CREATES SCARE

An early morning fire on the top floor of a two-story brick building used by the New England Hospital for Women and Children, on Hunock street, as a laundry, caused considerable excitement among the hundred odd patients of the hospital, although the alarm was soon quelled by the night nurses on duty, and the fire was extinguished with a slight loss.

The laundry is one of a group of brick buildings and about 100 feet from the nearest structure of the hospital proper. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective insulated electric light wire.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer.

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case."—Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

LIGHT SENTENCE FOR LAND FRAUD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Secretary Hitchcock was unofficially informed that in the matter of the prosecution of Burdett Richards and W. G. Comstock in the Federal Court at Omaha for the illegal fencing of 212,000 acres of Government land in Sheridan County, Nebraska, upon pleading guilty the defendants had been sentenced to remain for six hours in the custody of the United States marshal and pay a fine of $300 each.

"You can say," said the Secretary, in discussing the verdict, "that I am surprised and indignant. The punishment is utterly inadequate. The indictment was the result of four years of determined effort and the expenditure of thousands of dollars by the Government."

OWING to the many demands made upon persons during the present day it is not always easy or convenient to pay cash for clothing. Yet it is always important to be well dressed and hence the argument for credit clothing becomes strong and inviting. Because you may select your garment, pay a small cash payment and arrange to settle the balance in weekly payments. You keep well dressed, you are not inconvenienced; you get liberal terms, you pay low prices, and you wear the overcoat or suit while paying for it. This plan has pleased thousands by reason of its simplicity, convenience and satisfaction. We are ready to please others, so come in anytime and start your account.

We are complete outfitters for Men, Women and Children's outer clothing and the quality and worth of our clothing are the keystones of our success.

NEW PORTRAIT OF BUNKER HILL HERO ON EXHIBITION

NEW PORTRAIT OF BUNKER HILL HERO.

A remarkable portrait of Colonel William Prescott, who defended the American position at the battle of Bunker Hill, is on exhibition at the gallery of Doll & Richards, Park street. It is from the brush of William M. Chase, and represents Colonel Prescott in the flush of battle, his hand on his sword and the word of command on his lips.

The man pictured by the artist, although forty-nine years old at the time of the battle of Bunker Hill, looks considerably younger. This is due to the fact that from descriptions in letters now in possession of descendants of Colonel Prescott, it appears that the gallant commander was a man of great robustness and dash and one upon whom the years left no mark.

The putting of him in the blue and buff adopted later as the distinguishing garb of officers in the Continental Army, has excited some controversy on the score of historical accuracy, but at least one letter written by one of the minute men who fought under him on that day, bears out this contention that such a uniform was worn by him.

The painting is one of eight now being painted by William M. Chase, Hubert Von Robert W. Vonnoh and Prince Troubetskoy for the library of the Scranton homestead at Scranton, Pa. The forefathers of the present owner of the homestead took an active part in the struggle for American independence, both on the American and British side, and Mr. William Frankfort Parsons, architect and United States commissioner to the Paris exposition in 1900, to whom the work of decorating the library to like house was entrusted, conceived the idea of peopling the room with the likenesses of the commanders under whom they had fought.

The idea is quite original and will no doubt find much favor with New England people whose ancestry goes back to Revolutionary days.

Four of the men pictured were present at this same battle of Bunker Hill. There are General, afterward Viscount William Howe, who commanded the British forces on that day; Colonel, afterward Major-General John Patterson, who led the minute men from Connecticut; Colonel, afterwards General John Stark, in command of the detachment of Massachusetts volunteers, and Colonel Prescott. The other four portraits deal with the campaign against Canada.

BISHOP SAW ICE FOR FIRST TIME

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 17.—Mgr. Libert Boeynaems of Hawaii, bishop of the order of the Sacred Heart, on his way from Rome to Honolulu, visited the Fairhaven fathers, they being the only members of the order at present residing in the United States.

There was ice in the river, the first natural ice, the bishop said, that he had ever seen in his life.

The bishop is interested in the leper problem in Massachusetts and says he thinks from the description of the leper woman in Waterboro that she has not the disease, unless she has it in a very light form.

COL. HARRISON IN FIST FIGHT

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 16.—Harmon Hutson, Adjutant-General of the Spanish War Veterans, and Colonel Russell B. Harrison, ex-Adjutant-General of that organization, now department commander for Indiana, and son of the late President Benjamin Harrison, engaged in a rough and tumble fight in the latter's office, in which it is said Harrison was painfully injured.

It is said that Hutson upon assuming the office called upon Colonel Harrison and demanded that he turn over $8 of the funds. He says Harrison started the trouble by calling him a liar, at the same time striking him. Hutson says he then sent Harrison sprawling into a corner. He accuses Harrison of hurling a cuspidor at him as he was leaving the office. The screams of a young woman stenographer added to the excitement.

AMERICAN SUES KING EDWARD

WILKESBARRE, Nov. 17.—A. L. Lindsey of this city has begun an action to recover from King Edward VII. a fortune estimated at $875,000.

Captain George Lindsay Anthony Wilson died in London on January 22, 1905. He was a bachelor, and as no trace of legal heirs could be found his fortune was awarded, on October 21, to King Edward, under the intestate laws of Great Britain.

Mr. Lindsay declares that he has established the fact that the late Captain was his cousin. His attorney, W. S. McLean, has engaged counsel in London. In a letter to Mr. McLean they state that the proof of Mr. Lindsay's relationship to Captain Wilson is perfect.

Such an opportunity to own a bang-up Overcoat at a fraction of its worth will not occur again, and full advantage should be taken of the great buying event by all who want to get $2 worth of value for every dollar expended. We have still a great quantity of Winter Suits on hand, and the Suits, as well as the Overcoats, must be quickly cleared out, for in twenty days more our lease will have expired and we must then get out. STATE SUES BIG COMPANIES FOR $100,000,000

Attorney of Illinois Says Two Hundred Acres of Made Land Is Stolen.

INCLUDES ALL LAKE FRONT

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Wholesale proceedings against big corporations and individuals, alleged to have filled in 200 acres of land valued at $100,000,000 along the lake front, or squatted on land belonging to the State, are to be instituted by Mr. Healy, State's attorney, to force restitution.

The proceedings are the result of an investigation conducted by the State attorney's office. The lands affected extend along the entire lake front boundary of Cook county.

The Illinois Steel Company, the Illinois Central Railway Company, the Chicago Beach Hotel Company, and several lumber and dock companies occupying land north of the mouth of the Chicago River are the principal corporations affected by the proceedings. Among the individuals are some of the best known property owners along the Lake Shore drive.

QUEEN OF CLUBS WRITES A PLAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Mrs. Dore Lyon has written a one-act play. Not only is Mrs. Lyon a playwright, but she is also the Queen of Clubs and as such created more sensation by reason of her utterances than any other woman in America.

Her experiences would have furnished material for a club comedy of unusual merit, but she has taken a domestic episode as her theme. She has called her play "Madame la Marquise" and it will be presented December 4 by the New Century Club. Mrs. Lyons is now president of the Eclectic Club.

MANAGER BILLY NOLAN TELLS CARTOONIST TAD HIS PLANS FOR BATTLING NELSON

MOWATT LOSES TO ATTELL

BALTIMORE, Nov. 17.—Abe Attell was given the decision over Tommy Mowatt at the end of the fifteen-round bout before the Eureka Athletic Club.

The battle was fast and furious all the way. The fighting was particularly vicious and at times Mowatt fought like a wildcat. In the fourth round he smothered Attell under a storm of right and left swings and only Abe's wonderful cleverness in blocking and covering up saved him.

Attell kept jabbing Mowatt, and at the end had him badly cut up and bleeding. Twice he sent Mowatt to the floor with rights to the jaw, but he seemed to lack the necessary knockout punch.

Next Thursday night Attell will meet Kid Sullivan, and this should make one of the liveliest battles of the season.

HOT SHOT FOR JIMMY BRITT

BY TAD.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—"Jimmy Britt and his brother can talk from now until doomsday about a return match with Nelson, but not until I get the money they owe me will I ever stop to think twice over the matter," said Billy Nolan, manager of the Battling Dane, yesterday afternoon, in the lobby of his hotel on Broadway.

"The Britts gave us shabby treatment in our fight in Frisco, and now that Pat has beaten him decisively I shall drop him off the list. Pat beat him twice. The first time he was robbed, but the second time he hung one on Britt's jaw that didn't come off, and there was no need of a referee then. I'm out about $6,000 on account of that fight, and until it is settled Mr. Britt can keep on talking.

"About our future plans? Nolan leaned back in the big chair, lit his cigar and said: "Pat will be there in about three weeks, and after a show in New York we will consider either a trip to London or a fight with McGovern.

"We fully intend to cross the water, however. But can show over there and get the coin as he can here. We will probably stay over four or five months, for all of betting is done over here for a hard campaign of fights again."

"What about Terry McGovern?" quizzed one of the party, who had a warm place in his heart for the Brooklyn terror.

"Now," continued Nolan, "we will fight McGovern providing that we get good enough inducements.

"The last time Nelson should reap all the benefits of his hard work, and unless we can get a big purse with Terry I think that Pat should still draw down his $1,500 a week on the stage. He is sure of that, you see, and we couldn't afford to stop, go into training and waste three or four weeks for a measly purse of $8,000.

"I hope you see what I mean. When McGovern was champion he got all that he could on the stage, and Nelson intends doing the same.

"It isn't that we fear Terry, you know. Nelson offered to fight McGovern last year in Frisco. He didn't have the name then and McGovern refused, so Young Corbett was substituted. McGovern has no kick coming at all.

"We could fight twenty rounds our West, you know, and get some money, but in Philadelphia I am inclined to believe that the purse would be entirely too small.

"Nelson will fight any of them as soon as we get a good offer, and I think that Jimmy Gardner will be our next man. Jimmy is considered the best man in the world to-day, outside of Ruhlin, and they would draw a tremendous house."

Nolan is looking well considering that he has been knocked so numerously out West. He has been over the circuit from East and declares that most of them told only the good deeds of Britt and Willus.

MITCHELL WILL BE A YANKEE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Charley Mitchell will be an American. The veteran fighter is to take out naturalization papers and live the rest of his life in New York.

He will sail for London next week or the week after and remain there until the first of next February, winding up his business affairs. Then he will return to New York for good.

"I'm going to be a Yankee—that's my main business just now," said Charley.

COACH ROBINSON, WHOSE MEN AT BROWN HAVE PLAYED BOTH TEAMS THIS SEASON,

PICKS YALE ELEVEN TO BEAT HARVARD

BY COACH ROBINSON OF BROWN.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 17.—To compare the defence of the two teams is rather a difficult matter, as Brown played a much better offensive game against Yale than against Harvard. The offence which Brown showed in the Harvard game could not compare for a minute with their showing in the game with the Elis, the latter being about the best exhibition which the Brown team has put up thus far this season, and if they only play as well in the Dartmouth game I will be satisfied.

Harvard may have a little stronger defence, but there is very little difference on that point, as the showing the Elis made when we had them on their five-yard line was certainly magnificent. I think that Harvard's line is strong at just the point where Yale is the weakest, the centre. Brown could not gain at all through Harvard's centre, but many gains were made through the centre of the Yale line.

Harvard's line is composed of heavier men than Yale's, but they lack the speed that the latter have, and often a fairly heavy and speedy line is much better than a slow, heavy one. Without a doubt, Yale has a pair of ends which Harvard has nothing to compare with, and, to my mind, Harvard will not succeed in running back very many punts, with such men as Shevlin and Coates at the extremities of the Yale line. The teams are about equal as regards secondary defence. If anything, Yale is slightly superior.

The comparison of the offensive strength of the two teams is a much easier matter than the defence, for in this department of the game Yale is without question the peats' line and it is no easy matter to stop superior. The Yale back field is the fastest aggregation that I have seen this season, and the speed at which they get their plays off is indeed surprising. They hit their opponents like a battering ram and there has to be a good strong second any defence to stop them.

The difference between the attack of the teams is just this: The Harvard backs have a heavy line in front of them, and when once they get started it is hard work to stop them, as the line has the confidence of the back field, and when they open up a hole the backs are always there, and, aided by the interferences of the heavy and bulky linemen, they burst through their opponents like a battering ram and there has to be a good strong second any defence to stop them.

'NOODLES' HAHN IS SIGNED BY HIGHLANDERS

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17.—Frank "Noodles" Hahn, former premier of the Cincinnati Reds' twirling corps, to-day signed to play with the New York American outfit next year.

Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics, also had his lines out for Hahn. The pitcher was wanted by the Quakers so that they would have a side-wheeler in the event that "Rube" Waddell would not be fit for star service next year.

DARTMOUTH READY FOR HARVARD

With the confidence born of a fifth season of success, the Dartmouth football eleven, which meets Harvard at the Stadium on Cambridge afternoon at 2 o'clock, is quartered at Auburndale. The squad, which numbers thirty-one, including coaches and players, arrived in the Hub late yesterday afternoon and went directly to their lodgings at the Woodland Park Hotel.

The Green eleven is in excellent shape, with the exception of Captain Maio. He has an injured shoulder, which he sustained in the hard battle with Amherst last Saturday. The chances are strongly against his playing, as the Hanover coaches are anxious to save him for the contest with Brown, which is Dartmouth's most important gridiron fight of the season.

If Maio doesn't get into the lineup, Blatherwick, who substituted for him in the Princeton game, which, by the way, the Hanoverites won, will play his position. Maio is a great leader, but he has a worthy substitute in Blatherwick, who is a big, strapping player.

Thayer, the freshman guard, is suffering from a strain, but it is not serious enough to keep him out of the game.

Dartmouth hopes to beat Harvard, but the men are not overconfident. A dry field will do much towards a Green victory, as the Hanoverians admit that the Crimson will have a big advantage on a wet and slippery field, because of the superior weight of the Cambridge men. Coach Folsom feels certain, as does Trainer Bowley, that if the Crimson is victorious, it will be by a small score.

The Hanover team will be put through a light signal practice at Auburndale this afternoon.

The odds are ten to seven in favor of Harvard at present for to-morrow's game.

Dartmouth tied Harvard last year, and defeated them two years ago.

The team was given a royal send-off at Hanover, N. H., at 11 o'clock yesterday by a gathering of 600 students. The team is in will likely line up to-morrow afternoon can through signals in their street clothes. The speed which was manifest in the game with Princeton is still in evidence, and it is thought by the coaches that the game with Amherst has done much to help the team in getting top form.

Quite a lot of betting has been done on Harvard, but owing to Dartmouth's showing against Amherst the odds are quoted at 10 to 7 in favor of Harvard.

It is very probable that De Angelis will be played at left end in place of Church, who played last year, and Kenney, who started in the game against Princeton. He is thought to be slightly superior to the other players. The lineup of the team to-morrow will, in all probability will be as follows: De Angelis or Church, l. e.; Bankart, l. t.; Blake or Thayer, l. g.; Griffin, c.; Gage, r. g.; Laing, r. t.; R. Glass, r. e.; J. A. Blatherwick, q. b.; Blatherwick, l. h. b.; Herr, r. h. b.; Rich, f. b.

The squad is Captain Maio, l. h. b.; Herr, r. h. b.; J. W. Gage, q. b.; G. N. Bankart, l. t.; R. Glass, r. e.; E. D. Rich, f. b.; J. B. Glaze, q. b.; J. T. Griffin, c.; J. A. McDonald, l. g.; M. K. Smith, r. g.; D. J. Church, l. e.; J. A. Blatherwick, l. h. b.; H. . Coburn, r. h. b.; J. A. Greenwood, f. b.; H. S. McDevitt, q. b.; J. T. Smith, l. h. b.; C. Smith, r. t.; Gardner, l. g.; Thayer, l. g.; Walker, r. g.; Stearns, r. e.; Chase, c.; Kennedy, l. e.; Laing, r. t.; Pritchard, r. e.; Dillingham, c.; Blake, l. g.; McAuliffe, l. h. b. and DeAngelis, l. e.

LAST DAYS OF FIGHT PICTURES AT HUB

Although the moving pictures of the Britt-Nelson fight have been practically three weeks in this city, fight fans are going to tire of seeing them, and the Hub Theatre is well filled three times daily.

This is the last week, however, and Manager Marshall will move on to Philadelphia on Sunday.

BIG DEMAND FOR BAT'S BOUT

New York, Nov. 17.—The proposed match between Battling Nelson and Terry McGovern was talked over last night at the Hotel Cadillac. Joe Humphreys acting for McGovern, met Billy Nolan, the Dane's sponsor and manager, at 9 o'clock.

Several offers for the fight were considered. One came from Savannah from J. O'Dell. O'Dell wired that he would guarantee a $5,000 gate or would give the fighters a purse of $10,000 with no percentage. Another was from the New Tuxedo Club, which is located just outside of Philadelphia and which is controlled by Tom O'Rourke. The Tuxedo people are ready to post a forfeit of $2,500 and agree to build a commodious clubhouse with a seating capacity of 8,000.

John Kelly, a Philadelphia promoter, who was present at Tuesday night's session, wired both Nolan and Humphreys from Philadelphia his regrets that he was unable to attend. He added, though, that if the National A. C. of Philadelphia, which organization several weeks ago offered a purse of $8,000 or 80 per cent. of the gross, would not go any higher he would give an enticing guarantee. He further said that he could get a hall in Philadelphia that would seat 5,000 persons.

SHARKEY BOXES WITH NAVY CHAMPS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Tom Sharkey, accompanied by a BOSTON AMERICAN representative, paid a visit to the H. M. S. Drake and the United States battleship Kearsarge and sparred with the champion heavyweights of the British and American squadrons that are now anchored in the Hudson River. Sharkey bored three rounds with Cockayne, the British champion, on the deck of the Drake, and later sparred three rounds with Brownbridge, the American champion, on the Kearsarge, known among his mate as "Kid Collins."

After a try-out with both men, Sharkey declared that he believed the American would defeat the English champion if they ever came together. Both men are anxious to have it out in the ring, and unless the commanders of the Drake and the Kearsarge interfere, the international battle for the supremacy of the navies will be fought to-night in this city.

NO PRINCETON MONEY UP

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Local betting on the Yale-Princeton game has been very slight. Few bets have been made on the Stock Exchange, where generally a good deal of betting is done. There is no Princeton money. Odds of 2½ to 1 on Yale have been offered, but not passed up. Several bets of even money have been made that Yale will beat both Princeton and Harvard.

GRAHAM IS INELIGIBLE

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17.—Manager Kelly, of the St. Paul American Association team, must go to the St. Louis Americans, according to a decision reached by the National Board of Appeals.

Player Graham, who was drafted by the Boston Americans and took advance money from the New York Nationals, was declared ineligible until he repays the money.

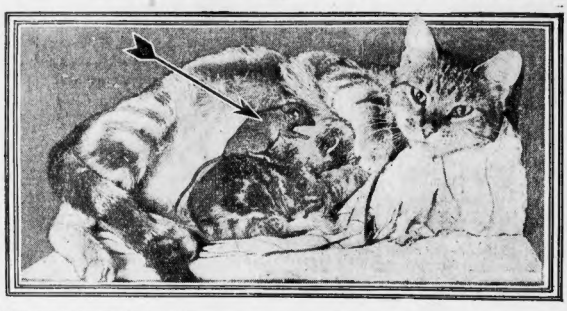
CAT ADOPTS BABY RAT AS ONE OF HER OWN FAMILY



Photograph showing famous Chicago cat and the baby rat which she has adopted into her family

BOSTON pet stock fanciers of all sorts are greatly interested in a most unusual freak of animal affection, a sleek Tabby cat mothering a baby rat, giving it as much love and care as she does to her ten-day-old kitten.

Thus has the prophecy of Isaiah, "that the wolf shall lie down with the lamb," been fulfilled in a manner, by this bitter-day Tabby cat.

This mother cat is a handsome household feline, one of the plump, contented-looking kind that is to be found in thousands of American homes. And she is by her ten-day kitten, the latest an expert ratter. She has kept pride of the family hearth free from rats and mice, according to the cruel canon when the little rat began to gnaw its whining kitter to one side and laid and takes, brought up several lit- the rat down. CHAPTER LII.

An Unlooked-for Proceeding

LAURENCE CRAIG returned to his cell prepared for the worst. He saw no possibility now of escaping the lash, and he nerved himself to meet it with fortitude.

Pale, but calm and resolute, he sat awaiting the dread summons. He no longer shuddered at the sound of footsteps in the corridors. Since this horrible degradation must inevitably be inflicted upon him the sooner it was over the better. It was not the physical pain he feared. But it was the disgrace that was attached to it. Gladly would he have bought exemption from the disgrace at the cost of suffering a hundred times as keen.

But although by sheer force of will he had made himself strong to endure, yet his heart was like lead within him. This flogging would mean more to him than the mere infliction of pain. It was more bitter than his own ignominy; It would mean the shattering forever of all his life's best hopes. It would mean forfeiture of Geraldine.

He had realized this in the short time that had passed since the jeering guards announced sentence upon him. His thoughts had flashed into the one scene he had witnessed long before, in the punishment hall at Grimley—the scene where Jack Urquhart released from the triangle to which he had been bound, limp as a jelly-fish and with his back all raw and bleeding. Could a man who had gone through that, however innocently, ever look his fellow men squarely even to touch the hand of such a woman as Geraldine?

She would not alter, Laurence knew. She, in her loving sweetness, would be the same to him as heretofore. But would it be manly in him to accept her devotion in the goodness of heart?

His every love and reverence for her said to him—"No." The husband once so lovely and so noble should be a man who could stand upright before the world with his dignity unsullied; not one who had incurred his back to receive a shameful chastisement. She must not give her young young life to a man who had been whipped like a hound. He would refuse to accept the sacrifice, even though she were willing to give it.

So he thought as, throughout the whole day, he sat in almost melodious expectancy. When darkness came he knew that he would have a few hours' respite, and, worn out, he flung himself down on his plank bed to sleep.

He awoke early on the following morning and set himself to the work of steeling out his self. At 7 o'clock a warder brought the iron door open and served his breakfast. To Laurence's surprise, it was not the usual loaf of bread and a can of water, but a dish of chick, with curry and rice. He ate it with eager relish, knowing that the punishment would be required to give him bodily strength to bear the lash. A couple of hours afterward his cell door was opened. A warder entered.

"Now, then, Laurence, and he straightened himself for the expected order.

The warder conducted him to the bath-house, and there brought to him his old strip. Laurence mechanically obeyed. But when he had taken off his other garments he suddenly stopped him and proceeded to unfasten his fetters. This was an unusual course. Convicts receiving chains generally bathe without having their fetters removed.

When Laurence had washed himself he was supplied with fresh flannels and a suit of ordinary prison clothes, not the usual parti-colored costume of punishment. He dressed himself diligently, wondering meanwhile what could be the reason of the unlooked for proceeding.

His wonder was greatly increased when, instead of being marched into the hall where he expected to receive his flogging, he was taken into a long, white washed passage and there handcuffed.

A door was opened and he was pushed into one of the narrow compartments of a prison van. Then the thought flashed across his brain—was it possible that they were going to take him back to Grimley? Was he to be given the opportunity he desired of confronting Gunnaway and publicly accusing him of his disgraceful bargaining with Ogara? Laurence himself did not as yet know the full guilt of the compact between his enemy and the inhuman warder.

The van drove off quickly. Laurence was its only occupant. After a ride of about an hour he heard the shrill whistle of a locomotive. Descending from the van, he was marched down the platform of a railway station, and thrust into an ordinary third-class carriage in charge of a couple of armed warders.

"Where are you taking me, sir?" he asked of one of them.

"Hold your tongue," was the warder's gruff reply. Laurence saw him examine his ticket previously to relapsing into a newspaper and settling himself comfortably in a corner.

The carriage door was locked, so that no other passengers entered, and Laurence was unable to conjecture where they were taking him. The names of the stations passed on the way did not enlighten him. But at last, when the train steamed into a great terminus, he realized with a rush of joy that this was London.

He started violently in his seat, thereby drawing upon himself a rebuke from one of his guardians.

London! Then he was on the eve of release! The promise of his solicitor had evidently been kept.

Light of heart, he got into the prison van that awaited him, and was driven through the roar of the London streets. Shut up in his narrow box in the van, he could see nothing, but the perpetual noise of traffic came to his ears. He could distinguish that familiar omnibus shout, and the words, "Bank, Bank, Charing Cross, Strand," came to his ears with a sound like the greeting of old friends.

The drive was long, and towards its close he was harassed by a fear that quickened his heart—the fear lest, after all, he was not to remain in London, but was again being taken through the city to another railway station to catch some train for Grimley, so when the door of the van was unlocked and he found himself being conducted into Newgate prison he was greatly relieved.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am too heavy and would like to be thinner. I weigh two pounds lighter than I am, in frequent bathing a good way to reduce flesh? What internal remedy should I take?

JENNIE W. S.

YES, baths are a good thing, and the daily bath is the most important feature of the antiobesity treatment. By this I mean a tub bath. Some Turkish bath taken once a week, besides, is an excellent thing, as the profuse perspiration thus induced helps to get rid of the waste products of the body more rapidly than any other means.

Men and women have complained that they do not get thin even after frequent Turkish baths, but they ought to shudder to think how enormous they might become if they had not formed the Turkish bath habit. Once a week is enough, though, remember.

Those who cannot afford a Turkish bath, people who live in rural districts where no such institutions are available, will find an excellent substitute in the cabinet baths, which may be purchased at any drug store and are for use in one's own home. The first cost is the chief expense.

I also recommend massaging with iodine soap after the bath. Rub the soap thoroughly into the skin under the arms and knees, as those spots are most favorable to its absorption.

I give below the formula for an internal remedy for the reduction of flesh, with the caution that, though it is supposed to be harmless, it is never wise to take any medicine internally until after consultation with the physician who understands your constitution. The formula follows:

Iodine of potassium, 60 grains.
Ammoniated water, 170 minims.
Tincture of lodine, 30 minims.
Distilled water, 7 ounces.

The dose is a teaspoonful in a little water three times

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The Actual Necessities of Life Are Few, and Everyone Ought to Make the Best Use of Them

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

EVERY day we hear people he supposed was overwork, a complete talking about the strain and toil it requires to obtain the mere necessities of life.

What are the mere necessities?

I was talking with Mr. Charles Courtney Haskell the other day and he brought this question forcibly to my attention.

In order to live, as Mr. Haskell puts it, we must have five things—air, sun, water, sleep and food.

The first four are all free. At least God gave them to man, and only monopoly can deprive him of them. And it is the fault of the people if they submit to existence without these four essentials to health.

Organized protests and ballots would restore them to humanity.

The only one of the five essentials to life and health which costs labor and money is food.

"But food costs so much," you will say.

Yes, indeed, the food we have been reared to think we must have costs not only labor and money, but health and life often.

Fine flour, many varieties of highly-seasoned dishes, corpses of animals and stimulating beverages, all cost dearly.

But these are not the "necessities of life."

Wrong Treatment

WHEN we come down to the truth of things we find that life is sustained and health maintained by simple food and drink, and small quantities rather than large portions.

The story of Charles Courtney Haskell's life should be encouraging to every invalid in the world to-day.

Mr. Haskell was broken down by what nervous wreck, with a disease for every specialist—lungs, liver, kidneys, digestive apparatus, all obeying the word of the walking delegate, the heart, and striking. Mr. Haskell was close to the half-century mark, and he was told that he must give up work and fill his system with nutritious food and take stimulating drugs, or he would die.

So the poor victim of tradition tried it. He ate three meals a day and took all kinds of treatment and grew worse every hour.

Then he heard of Dr. Dewey's no-breakfast plan, and, in order to escape the horrible process of stuffing his system with food he did not want, he tried waiting until noon before he partook of any sustenance. He began to improve and then he tried dropping meat from his diet. Still greater improvement.

He drank much pure water and an occasional glass of hot lemonade.

By allowing his system to rest from so much digestive labor and by taking only about one-third the food his doctors had prescribed, and no medicine, he soon found himself free of all pains and weaknesses, gaining strength, and his brain power greater than ever in his life.

That was twelve years ago. He is a splendid specimen of vigorous manhood to-day, walks five miles easily before his noon breakfast, and does not know he has any liver or digestive machinery. And the only way to be perfectly well is to be unconscious of this mechanism.

His diet now consists mainly of uncooked foods—nuts, fruits, cereals, vegetables, fish occasionally and much water. He works ten hours a day without fatigue and sleeps without dreams. He has company instead of other in appearance with each year.

Self-Denial

I KNOW of a woman who met with a shocking accident. The pole of a carriage struck her in the solar plexus, and she could not digest food enough to sustain life. Finally she was put upon a diet of raw eggs, boiled whole, and grew strong and well, regaining perfect health.

Many invalids have been restored to health by a diet of nothing but raw meat chopped fine. I am an enthusiast over milk diet, because it gives me good blood and vitality and strength when run down and depleted by overtaxing my digestion. A friend takes nothing but stewed prunes and cream and a glass of milk and fresh pears three times a day for her diet, and is always restored to bloom and health in two weeks' time. Another has lived wholly upon grapes for a few weeks with similar results.

All these diets are good, mainly because they are a rest to the system. Disease is a flag which nature flaunts to tell us we are on the wrong track. It needs no doctor to get us back again if we will use our own common sense and will power.

Two weeks' persistence in any one of these diets would cure two-thirds of the people who are suffering in the hands of specialists to-day.

Poor, sick world of humanity, awake to the truth and break free from your shackles.

Health is the simplest thing in the world if you wants enough to give up the luxuries which have brought you illness and misery.

But thousands of people prefer suffering to self-denial.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER IX.

Tackling a Torpedo

HUNSTON again!

The odds were all in his favor now.

Somehow and somewhere he had secured a new boat. It was manifestly a warship—a gunboat of the type the Japanese had used in their efforts to pacify the Philippines.

How Hunston had come by it was a matter which did not concern our friends on the island in the least.

For, anticipated as was the vessel and her guns, she was large enough and carried a sufficiently powerful armament to overawe and that this would be Hunston's purpose Jack made no doubt.

The gunboat was now to off shore, and her guns were now belching clouds of smoke, white solid shot rained about the beach.

Jack caught it up, and his face turned a shade paler, although he betrayed no other evidence of uneasiness.

"It's up to us to do something, Steel," he said quietly. "Hunston is coming for us at last. I guess he sees we are about as much afraid of those smoothbores as we would be of footballs."

Steel took the glass in his turn, and as he looked exclaimed aloud:

"That's funny," he said, "he's only sending one boat."

"Well, then, look out for dynamite or something of that kind," Jack replied. He had no mind to submit that our old friend Hunston, although he thinks Turkish baths is an army here and is going to sacrifice some of his subjects to the cause, would not has sent a torpedo as part of the cargo of that boat.

"What do you think we had better do?" asked Parsons, turning to Jack.

They looked to him to win.

The cowboy came within a hundred yards of shore.

Then she was brought up into the wind, and the men in the bow scrambled over board, apparently to escape the dynamite, which they believed was about to explode.

"Dynamite," said Jack. "Dynamite."

Dynamited

And Jack was right.

For when after the boat had stopped there had buried itself back on the beach, its nose through the green curl of the surf.

It was caught by a wave, and fell heavily on the sand.

There followed a terrific roar.

The island seemed to be moved by an earthquake, and a great white wall of water rose out of the sea for two hundred feet and buried itself back on the beach.

"Run for your life!" yelled Jack as soon as the explosion occurred. "It's a torpedo."

His friends had needed no warning, but scampered up the beach as fast as their legs would carry them, just in time to escape the downpour that swept everything before it into the sea.

It was a fatal time for the unhappy cannibals whom Jack had wounded that morning.

For when the flood had gone its course and only ruffled water of the ocean told of its coming there were not a dozen on the beach save a torn furrow of sand.

The dead and the living had been swept away; great rocks far to shorward had been torn from their bearings and rolled into the ocean, and only the uppermost parts of the island, where our friends had taken refuge, remained unharmed by the warring waters.

And out a little way to sea a greater calamity had befallen.

For the men in the boat sent out by Hunston had not counted on the upheaval of the seas, and had remained eagerly watching the effects of their deadly newsenger upon the shore party.

Now a great wave thrown back from the waterspout rushed shoreward, and up in the air was bearing down upon them.

The sailors on the island could see them rowing for their lives, and Hunston, with more courage than Jack had given him credit for, had sent his ship to their rescue.

A Daring Deed

But it was too late.

The wave caught them and toppled their boat over like an eggshell.

Hardly had it disappeared when the on rushing wall of water struck the ship.

Her bow rose almost perpendicularly into the air.

From the shore the red of her under body was visible almost from stem to stern.

Then she gradually settled back, and after tossing violently about for some minutes became comparatively quiet.

And now Hunston launched his final hope, for which the other had been but a preparation.

From a tube beneath the ship a still larger torpedo was launched, and hardly had it been fired when the ship turned and made at full speed for the island.

Underneath the water the torpedo sped, Jack, Steel and Parsons being all unconscious of its coming.

Suddenly Jack saw something black bobbing over the surface of the water.

The torpedo had risen and was riding on the surface.

"A bigger one!" he cried. "Come, we must not let it strike the sand."

"What!" exclaimed Steel and Parsons in chorus. "Meet a torpedo and try to stop it?"

Jack turned on them quietly.

"Either that, my friends," he said, "or drown like mice. This one will overwhelm the island. If you won't lend her off the sand I will."

And throwing off his coat he ran waist deep into the surf and waited expectantly as the big black cylinder sped toward him.

"REALLY," SAYS BERNARD SHAW, "I'M PROVOKED"

Author of "Mrs. Warren's Profession," Scores Police Commissioner.

GASPS AT WHAT HAPPENED

LONDON, Nov. 17.—G. Bernard Shaw has answered the critics who pronounced his play, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," unfit for production. He has also in a public letter paid his respects to Police Commissioner William McAdoo of New York city, who refused to allow the play to be presented after the opening performance. Mr. Shaw is as capricious as usual, and in his reply says:

"There is a sort of fate entangling the enemies of 'Mrs. Warren's Profession.' The commissioner was in a sufficiently difficult position in any case. He did not attempt to deny that the play was true to nature, but he had to contend that knowledge of the things mentioned in it must deprave and brutalize. Now, it is a policeman's profession to know all these things and to be in contact with them, so if the commissioner's contention is valid he himself would be deprived and a person entirely unfit to act as the moral censor of New York.

"I really do not wish to be offensive, especially as I have been so severely provoked, but where do you get your journalists? Some of our own are bad enough in all conscience, but—well, I put it to you whether you would not read 'Mrs. Warren's Profession' aloud in any company in ten times rather than the New York notices once. You can hardly imagine how incredible it is to Londoners that a Commissioner of Police should write sensational articles about a play and get them published in the papers as 'reports.'

"Not Teaching Morals," He Says.

That he should force a manager to withdraw the play by threatening to drag the actresses in it into a police court on a charge of indecency under a statute which makes it a criminal offence for any American woman to wear a new hat or wash her face is a thing beyond all belief here. As to the climax, the publication of letters from ladies to the Commissioner, with replies at full length, one can only gasp and wonder whether it really happened.

"As regards the play, we have no further explanations to offer except that it is a mistake to suppose my business is to teach moral lessons. My business is to interpret life by taking events occurring at haphazard in daily experience and sorting them out so as to show their real significance and inter-relation. Nothing in ordinary life tells a man when buying a box of matches he is driving some woman at the other end of New York, whom he never saw, and never will see, on to the streets. My play teaches him that. Having learned it he can draw what moral lesson he is capable of from it.

"Anybody who believes he would draw better ones or be a better man from believing that the sole relation between him and the woman at the other end of New York is merely the relation between two wholly disconnected social facts, one a highly moral, respectable one, and the other a vicious, disgusting one, is—excuse the phrase I am going to use, and which I am using in a scriptural sense, not expletively—a hopelessly damned fool."

The Noblest Woman in America

Eighty-four Years Old, Thoughtful, Hopeful, Brave, YOUNG, Full of Belief in the World That Is So Proud of Her

JULIA WARD HOWE

The day will come when women, creators of all our men, all our heroes, AND ALL OUR MORALITY AND VIRTUE, will have on earth the place that is due them.

Recognition of woman's place will come last in civilization, as recognition of the intellect has come last in our animal evolution. The highest within us is last to be developed, and the last to be acknowledged.

One woman in this country stands to-day a reminder of the place that WOMAN will hold among us in the future.

Her days are many. At the end of a beautiful life, she looks out now toward the great lights of eternity that beckon the faithful workers and BELIEVERS to an honorable rest, and to the hope of renewed work in the universe, AFTER rest.

There should be comfort and inspiration for every woman in the life of Julia Ward Howe; in the work that she has done in the past and in the work that she is doing, even now, in her eighty-fifth year.

In the Christmas number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, just published, this wonderful, and hopeful, AND YOUNG woman writes of the "best Christmas gift to our people."

She writes not like an OLD woman past eighty, but like a girl in her teens.

Her face is turned toward the future, not toward the past. She is full of hope and faith—a beautiful picture, encouraging to a world that too often lacks her courage and her sound, brave view of the work that men have done and can do.

Every old woman and every young woman should read this article by Julia Ward Howe. She condenses a hundred truths in two pages.

She tells the world that it needs, especially, "to know the value of what we possess."

She rejoices in the improved condition of women, and urges women to struggle on for better conditions and more complete power.

She tells the world that the good in our life to-day is due to the women of the past, AND SHE PROVES IT.

She praises the improved education of girls and demands that it be made better.

She sees in the education of women the death of superstition—and she sees clearly.

Above all, she impresses the fact that what we need most is to know and to appreciate WHAT WE ACTUALLY HAVE.

In two pages of the Cosmopolitan Magazine for Christmas this "grand old woman of America" preaches a useful and a wholesome sermon to every woman and man—and every woman and man should read it.

A wonderful brain lives and thinks within that noble head, and a true, good heart guides the brain.

Julia Ward Howe's great "Battle Hymn of the Republic" is the finest thing that any woman has written in this country—and there is a world of truth and prophecy in its opening words:

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord."

Her eyes, intelligent and true, HAVE seen the coming of God's glory on this earth.

Her eyes HAVE seen the coming of the glory of God, which means ultimate emancipation of man from misery, slavery and needless suffering.

She was born when slavery was the rule of the world—and she has lived to see slavery die, as piracy died in her lifetime.

She was born when the wife was the chattel of the husband—to be beaten, treated like an animal and deprived of even an animal's rights. She has lived to see that changed, AND TO HELP IN THE CHANGE.

She lived when it was a crime for the poor man to rebel against oppression, and when the lot of the factory woman and child in New England—DRIVEN TO SLAVERY BEFORE DAYLIGHT—was worse than that of the black slave driven to the cotton fields with the rising sun.

This splendid old woman of America has, indeed, "SEEN THE GLORY OF THE COMING OF THE LORD."

Her "battle hymn" says to the inhabitants of the earth:

"His truth is marching on."

Yes, the truth of God IS marching on, and that brave old woman, standing near the grave, with her eyes toward the RISING, not the setting, sun, sees the truth and tells it to the world.

She knows that the law of God is PROGRESS AND KINDNESS. She knows there is no going backward, and now, at eighty-four, as in her girlhood, she points out the road to man—STRAIGHT AHEAD, toward the truth, the light, AND JUSTICE.

Here, complete, is "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," expressing the soul of the noblest woman in America. Read it, teach it to your children, and, above all, UNDERSTAND it. See what she saw—JUSTICE that will not be denied in the end, PROGRESS that cannot be stopped, TRUTH THAT MUST TRIUMPH.

Can you read, without emotion, any line of this great hymn? Can you read it through without a feeling of deep love and reverence for the old woman who will soon pass out of the world's shadows into the real light—and leave this beautiful thought to guide others along the path of hope, of belief in the "glory of the coming of the Lord?"

THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC

MINE eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord:
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He has loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

I have seen Him in the watch fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I have read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps;
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel—
"As you deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal";
Let the hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on.

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat.
Oh! Be swift, my soul to answer Him! Be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me;
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

Who Would Not Look at Jupiter?

By Garrett P. Serviss

IN these crisp evenings when the dark comes early, and when the heavens seem to sparkle with the forerunning frosts of Winter, which now draw swiftly earthward from cold outer space, the greatest of all gods, Jupiter, adorns the eastern sky.

While Saturn glows in the of south, alone in his planetary grandeur, as if avoiding the presence of the livelier stars, Jupiter rises with the Pleiades, fast chased by Orion ablaze with wonderful brilliants.

It would be impossible to place in sharper contrast the peculiarities that distinguish the planets from the fixed stars than they are now placed by the presence of Jupiter in one of the richest regions of the starry heavens.

People who know little of astronomy, but wish that they knew more, often complain of the difficulty that they experience in trying to find the planets in the crowd of the stars.

Here, then, is an almost unparalleled opportunity, not only to find Jupiter, but to learn to recognize the essential difference between the appearance of the planet and that of the stars.

If you go out of doors between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening, you will see, over in the east, above the hills, a very brilliant point of light, gleaming like a distant signal lamp.

That is Jupiter. You cannot mistake him, for he is too plainly the king! He has no equals and no rivals about him.

But, now, note his most interesting situation with reference to two very beautiful and celebrated groups of fixed stars. Close above Jupiter, toward the west, you will see a glittering assemblage of small stars, grouped like a cluster of grapes sparkling with hoar-frost. They are the Pleiades, most famous of stars, most ancient in the superstitious reverence that they have excited from the very beginning of human history, and most mysterious in the light of modern scientific revelation of their half nebulous constitution.

On the other side, toward the east from Jupiter, you will see the V-shaped figure of the Hyades, with the splendid red-tinted Aldebaran blazing on the tip of one of the arms of the mimic letter.

Jupiter is like a golden fulcrum, on which, suspended at the ends of an imvisible balance, hang these two heaps of starry gems.

Then note the difference between the look of the great planet and the looks of those stars.

Take Aldebaran, for example. Its light is all a-glitter with restless shooting of bright colored rays. The light of Jupiter is steady, almost motionless, but slightly disturbed now and then by the passing of an atmospheric billow, like the reflection of a ship's lamp on the water.

If you watch Jupiter throughout the coming Winter you will see him slowly quit his place, leave the Pleiades and the Hyades and, eventually, with majestic step, advance eastward over the head of Orion, although at first he will move westward in consequence of the apparent retrogression in his movements caused by the swifter motion of the earth in the same direction.

In any event, whether you look at Jupiter now and forget him next week (which is not likely), or whether you continue to follow him round and round the sky as long as you live (which is far more probable), do not fail at the beginning of your acquaintance to fix in your mind the chief facts known about him.

Jupiter is a globe about thirteen hundred times as large as the earth, but the materials of which he is made are of such a nature, or in such a state, that in weight he exceeds the earth only three hundred and eighteen times.

His surface is a hundred and twenty times as extensive as that of the earth. He has four moons as large as, or larger than, our moon, and three that, as far as size goes, are mere toy moons, the largest of them being perhaps less than a hundred miles in diameter.

He is the giant of the planetary system, and has captured more comets, and, in general, exercised more disturbing force in the solar empire than any other member of it.

Is Jupiter inhabited? Astronomy cannot answer the question.

But, as in the case of Saturn, we must say: If Jupiter has inhabitants they cannot be much like us; they are either greater, or they are less than we in the ranks of organic existence.

What is food to one man may be fierce poison to others.
LUCRETIUS.

The Substitute

By James J. Montague

THE eleven came down like a Cossack brigade,
The guards fell like lead in the breach that they made;
The fullback paused briefly to strangle a half,
Then lunged on his way with a hideous laugh,
While rank upon rank in the grandstand arose
And shouted, "Hurrah! There the substitute goes!"

The substitute! See him! Unknown until now,
Compelled to smear mud on his unfurrowed brow,
To roll on the field till his clothing should seem
Like that of a man on the varsity team.
But his chance now has come—he's in action, and lo!
He's picked up the pigskin! And look at him go!

Ah! Woe to the jesters who once used to dare
To flout at his hopes and to jeer at his hair.
Ah! Woe to the captain who never would deem
Him fit to a post on the veteran team,
And woe to the halfback, though great his renown,
Who seeks to o'erthrow him and head off a down.

The maids in the grand stand rise up, one and all,
And gaze at the youth as he flies with the ball,
While handkerchiefs flutter and blue eyes are dim,
And soft voices whisper, "Oh! Bully for HIM!"
And still he speeds on while the jubilant coach
All sneeringly watches the halfback's approach.

He's past the five-yard line; he's still dashing on—
The rival team feels that the whole game is gone.
The halfback draws nearer, too late—yes! too late!
The bleachers and grandstand together roar: "Great!"
"Hurray for the substitute! He's won the game!"
"Hurray for the hero! WHAT! Aint that a shame?"

For while they applauded the halfback drew near,
Cut short our young friend in his frienzied career;
Got a grip round his legs, his muscles set tense,
And tumbled him airily over the fence!

It is the mind that makes the man, and our vigor is in our immortal soul.
OVID.
